Lebanon City Mayor Parker Gets Down On The Farm

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Editor

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) —The telephone rings. Soon, Lebanon City Mayor Jackie Parker and her 14-year-old son Max head out into the night to experience the birth of a soon-to-arrive calf.

This was all part of the Lebanon Valley Chamber of Commerce Farm-City Week job exchange program, which gives city business owners and managers an opportunity to spend a day on the farm with a local farmer. This farmer also has a chance to spend a day on the job with his exchange business partner — to learn how the other half lives and works.

As for Parker, even though her scheduled day on the farm was Wednesday, she had asked Laura and Bruce Heilinger, her host farm family, to call anytime a calf was about to be born. And as all farmers know, calves do not wait for a convenient time to be born. That was part of the farm lesson Parker was about to learn one night last week.

The mayor said she was surprised at how easy a time the cow had and she was interested in how the farm family helped the birthing process.

"My major is in biology," Parker said. "So I like to be outdoors. But I'm impressed with just how much work farmers do. They can't call in sick. The work doesn't stop for holidays or if you don't feel like getting up in the morning.

"I was thinking how great it felt to get up at 7 a.m. and go out of doors to work on the farm this morning. But Laura reminded me that you still have to go look for the cows even if it is raining and cold," Parker said. "Still, I think it is a great way to start the day.

Christmas Tree Issue Identification, Addressing Grower Concerns Occupy New Agent's Agenda

ANDY ANDREWS

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Penn State's new Christmas tree and nursery extension specialist wants growers to understand his plan.

First, according to Ricky M. Bates, assistant professor of ornamental horticulture, it will be important to identify industry issues "and address them through research and education, so we can get answers and recommendations back to you," he said.

Bates introduced himself to more than 50 growers early last week at the annual Penn State-sponsored Southeast Regional Christmas Tree Growers meeting at the Berks County Agricultural Center in Leesport.

Bates, who collaborated as a graduate student with Lancaster Farms, a nursery operated by Charlie Parkinson on the eastern shore of Virginia, discussed an array of research, such as "pot-in-pot" (PIP) production. PIP uses a container sunken in the ground, called a "socket pot" with a second "grow pot"

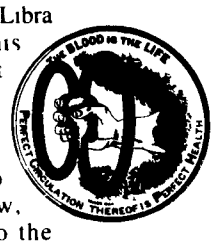
The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

NOVEMBER 6-12, 2000

ELECTION DAY, NOVEMBER 7

BLOOD MONTH

November was once known as Blot Monath, or "blood month," because once the harvest was done and the days had turned cold, it was time for the annual slaughtering. According to The Old Farmer's Almanac's month-by-month astrological timetables, the best times for this was around the date of the new Moon or when the Moon was in Virgo or Libra



Full Moon dates (Nov 11 is this year's Full Beaver Moon) were not considered favorable for livestock castration or slaughtering, because the greater gravitational pull of the Moon was thought to increase blood flow Even now, many Almanac readers look to the Moon to determine the best times for cutting hair, starting or ending projects, pruning crops, or going fishing

The hostess of the sky, the Moon . . .

–John Davidson (1857 1909)

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ If you're going to be away, freeze leftover milk. When you return, thaw it out and it will taste as usual.

LENTILS AND LAMB

2 pounds boned lamb
2 tablespoons olive oil
4 cups water
1-1/2 cups dried lentils
1 onion, chopped
4 cloves garlic, minced
1 bay leaf
1 teaspoon chopped fresh thyme (or 1/2 teaspoon dried)
1/2 teaspoon chopped fresh rosemary
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
3 carrots, chopped

Cut lamb into cubes and brown in oil in a large stewpot Add water and lentils (no presoaking required), then add onion, garlic, and seasonings. Cover and simmer for 2 hours Add carrots and cook for another 20 to 30 minutes.

Makes 6 servings.

OPINION

FFA Students Are Good

When you have nearly 40,000 jacketed FFA students in one place, that's a lot of blue. Last week this happened at the National FFA Convention in Louisville, Ky.

Membership in FFA across the nation is at it's highest point since 1983. With 455,306 members in 7,226 chapters, the nation's leading agricultural youth organization is growing even stronger.

Almost everyone in the farm community knows that FFA makes a positive difference in the lives of students by developing their potential for leadership, personal growth, and career success through agricultural education.

Now a new study at Perdue University proves the point. This study compared FFA members with the "typical high school student" as reported by a national survey of the Horatio Alger Association. And they determined that ag education students who are also FFA members possess attitudes and exhibit behaviors that indicate they benefit more from their high school experience than the general student population.

And this was evident at the national convention. The FFA students we met were courteous, articulate, and acted much more mature than their age would suggest. Their behavior was a credit to themselves, their teachers, their parents, and the local schools and chapters at home.

We often hear bad news about our youth. But the good news is that FFA students at the national convention were good.

❖ FARM FORUM ❖

Editor:

I was very disappointed to learn recently about some of our local schools signing contracts with soda companies. I, myself, would question whether these schools are seriously looking out for the welfare of their students.

Some people do not realize how important it is to get the proper amount of calcium in their diet during their teen years, when their body is growing. Osteoporosis, a disease where bones become weak and brittle, begins during the teen years.

One of the factors in causing this disease is a lack of calcium. Osteoporosis develops slowly due to the loss of large amounts of bone mass. It causes a great deal of pain and suffering, as well as permanent disabilities. Osteoporosis affects more than 25 million Americans.

Milk and other dairy products are a delicious and easy way to get your daily amount of calcium of three to four servings.

These school's reasoning on offering this soda to students is the fact that it's available only after school. Many of these students have athletic functions after school. I don't believe offering a can of sugar-sweetened soda which has no nutritional value at all is a wise choice. Milk, on the other hand, offers a powerful package of nine essential vitamins and nutrients. How is a can of soda going to help build strong bones and muscles for these young athletes?

I certainly hope these young athletes "Rethink Their Drink" and grab one of the new Milk Chugs, instead.

Now Is The Time

To Look For Mold On Corn Ears

Now is the time farmers should be thinking about the possibilities of ear molds in corn, according to Robert Anderson, Lancaster County extension agronomy agent.

Detection of these molds before harvest is an excellent way to avoid feeding problems later. Some fungi produce mycotoxins that are harmful to livestock.

Dr. Gary Munkovold, extension plant pathologist in Iowa, suggests when checking fields for molds, the farmer should husk at least 100 plants scattered throughout the field. It is important to check each field separately based on hybrid, tillage and rotation history, and planting date because each of these factors may affect the occurrence of ear molds.

Identifying that a mold exists is only the first step. The mold itself should be identified because their potential impact on animals is different based on the mold found.

To Identify Molds On Corn

Gibberella ear rot is caused by the fungus Gibberella zeae. It can be identified most readily by the red or pink color of the mold. However, in some cases it can appear white.

It usually begins at the tip of the ear but can rot the entire ear. Gibberalla occurs more commonly when the weather is cool and wet after silking. Gibberella can produce vomitoxin and zearalenone.

Diplodia ear rot appears as a white mold beginning at the base of the ear. The mold and the kernels then turn a grayish brown color and rot the entire ear. A very distinguishing characteristic of Diplodia is the appearance of raised black bumps called pycnidia on the moldy husk or kernels. Aspergillus ear rot is generally more of a problem for corn in storage. It appears as gray-green powdery mold. In the field it is more common in hot, dry years. It can grow at temperatures above 90 degrees and with corn moisture as low as 15 percent. It is easy to detect under a black light because it produces compounds that are fluorescent. However, a positive detection does not directly result in the presence of aflatoxins. If the presence of toxins is suspected, testing of the corn should be done. Remember, corn that is moldy going into storage will not store well.

To Control Rodents In Corn Cribs

Mice and other rodents take a heavy toll on corn stored as ear corn in wooden and metal corncribs, according to Robert Anderson, Lancaster County extension agronomy agent.

The corncrib provides an ideal habitat for rodents. It provides sheltered nesting areas out of the cold winter weather along with an endless supply of food.

The control of mice and rats under these conditions is very difficult. However, several things can be done to help keep rodent populations down.

First, traps may be used to monitor the extent of the problem. Trapping alone will not eliminate the rodent population. Second, screening wherever possible to exclude rodents will also help keep their numbers under control. However, when a severe problem exists, the commercial use of tracking powder has been the most effective means of eradication.

YOU ARE THE MAN!

Background Scripture:
2 Samuel 11:1 through 12:25.
Devotional Reading:
Numbers 15:30,31.

The tragic story of David and Bathsheba is never obsolete because it speaks, not only of something that happened more than two thousand years ago, but of what happens today, too.

It is difficult to read it without thinking about our nation's recent agony over the personal conduct of our some of our own political leaders. The sordid episode of King David is instructive for us. The uncompromising honesty with which it presents its characters is one of the Bible's great strengths.

Ganse Little says, "No recorded history, either sacred or secular, is so blunt in its handling of the weaknesses of its heroes."

It is not just a story about what David did, but about what so many of us do. It also helps us realize that David's terrible sin did not keep God from using him. God is able to use sinners to do what he wants accomplished. Incredible as it may seem, although David committed adultery and murder, he was still the Lord's anointed.

His sin caused great tragedy, not only to the people closely involved, but to the nation as well. But God did not take away the throne from him.

Why? Perhaps because it suited God's purposes to keep him there.

Under Jewish law, David should have lost his life. According to our sensibilities today David should have been replaced, thrown out of office — there was no impeachment in those days!.

Rationalizing Sin

of his subjects probably defended him with the same kind of logic that is so prevalent today: his sin was the product of a combination of circumstances. If the Ammonites had not rejected his treaty, there would have been no war and Uriah would have been home. So, David would not have been able to follow up on his temptation and that would have ended it.

When we are pinpointed with our sin, it is remarkable how easily we can spread it around, like Adam telling God that it was because Eve offered him the forbidden fruit that he ate of it. Somebody is always offering us something to which we need to say no!

It begins with the temptation of the eye. David saw Bathsheba bathing on a nearby rooftop. That could have been the end of it right there, but it wasn't. Then came the lustful thought. It didn't have to follow, but most of us can understand how it did. If it had stopped there, we could say: no real harm done! But there was a next step — an inner decision to do something about the temptation of the eye and the lustful thought. David "saw," David 'inquired," and "David sent." The thought became a deed.

We speak of David and Bathsheba, as if she shared the King's guilt. But the Bible does not tell us that she was a willing participant. More likely, she was the victim of David's status and power. Even today we castigate people of power who use it to intimidate others. David's sin was not only adultery, but the arrogant misuse of power.

Complications! A lot of damage was done with the adultery, but perhaps things could still have been salvaged. But there were some unanticipated complications — as there usually are.

First, Bathsheba got pregnant and her husband was away with the army at the time. Sin is like quicksand: the harder we struggle to get out, the deeper we sink. Another unanticipated complication: Uriah's loyalty to the code of honor that a soldier on active duty will not have sexual relations with his wife. When David tried to persuade him and then got him drunk, he found that Uriah was more committed to his vow then he was to personal pleasure.

Then David takes the next and biggest step down this tragic road: he plots to have Uriah killed "accidentally." How far he has come along this road from the first step when he looked upon Bathsheba and lusted after her.

The confrontation between David and the Nathan is the high point of the story. David's response to the tale of injustice was swift and forceful: "As the Lord lives, the man who has done this deserves to die..." (12:5). Isn't it remarkable how quickly we identify and condemn sin when we think we are not personally involved! Our sense of justice and indignation are easily ignited when someone else is being judged. So David fell into Nathan's trap : 'You are the man!"

There are always two results of sin: alienation from God and practical consequences. Eventually, when David repented, God forgave him. But some of the consequences of his sin would live on with him — as they do with us.

'Reinventing The Appalachian Shepherd' Conference Nov. 9-10

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. — Within the Appalachian region of the U.S. lies a group of counties — eastern Ohio, western Virginia, south central and western Pennsylvania, and most of West Virginia — that shares a topography and climate as well as location well suited for sheep production.

This combination provided the region a rich sheep history, a time when many counties reported agriculture as their leading industry and sheep as the most profitable and largest enterprise. Those days are gone.

Sheep numbers have fallen steadily for the last 130 years. The tragedy lies in the fact that even though the economy has changed and the sheep industry of the past will never return to the previous level of profit or numbers, this area possesses every resource necessary for sheep farming to become a sustainable source of income for farm families. In fact, ewes eating forages from Appalachian mountainsides might be the management model best able to compete in the current agricultural order of narrow margins and severe price swings.

For sheep to again make an important contribution to farm income and family well-being, the industry will have to be rebuilt with new farmers, new management systems, and new alliances — this means "reinventing the Appalachian shepherd."

A conference with that title is scheduled Nov. 9-10 at the Ramada Inn in Morgantown, W.Va. to consider what is required for a new sustainable and financially important sheep industry.

This conference will become the gathering point for all the researchers, business folks, educators, and producers from the mid-Appalachian region to share their work and consider production models for the future.

Many bright and energetic people from all sectors of the regional sheep industry are working on more projects than most of us know and solving more problems than most knew existed. This conference will provide a platform for them to share their ideas and everyone else to consider and react to them.

This conference will not be limited to just local presentations and ideas. Some management models from other sheep producing regions will be shared. Those attending the conference should leave with a better understanding of where our sheep industry needs to go and how to get there.

The program includes reports from the following research and industry leaders:

- The Easy Care Ewe Selection and Breeding Program, Dave Notter, Virginia Tech.
- Out of Season Management Model, Keith Inskeep and Doolarie Singh, WVU.
- Internal Parasite Abatement and Forage Management, Bill Shulaw, Ohio State.
- The Predator Control Program of the Future, Bill Bonwell APHIS, USDA.
- Intensively Managed/Low Input Flocks, Jim Clay, Ohio State (retired).
- Sheep Budgets for Appalachian Shepherds, a Pocahontas County, W.Va. Case Study, Jim Pritchard, extension agent, Pocahontas County.
- Incorporating Thousands of Years of Natural Selection Into a Logical On-Farm Breeding Program, Charles Parker, Ohio State.
- The Rewards of a Long-Term In-Flock Selection Program, Marjorie and Walker Rayburn, Edenton, N.C.
- The Fencing Systems of the Future, Stan Potratz, Premier Fence Systems, Washington, Iowa.
- Challenges and Opportunities of Large-Scale Shepherding, John Etchpare, Cheyenne, Wyo.
- The New Shepherding Paradigm, Paul Rodgers, American Sheep Industry Association.
- Forage inventory and production potential for the Appalachian Region.

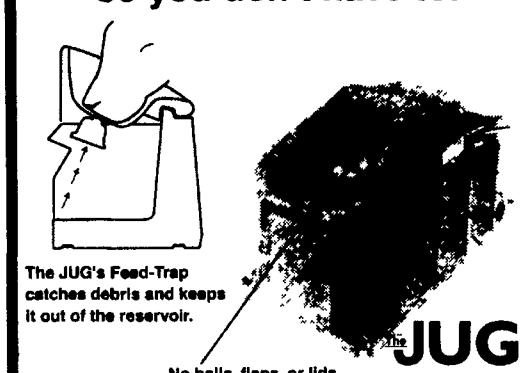
We Salute Our DAIRY FARMERS

The JUG Livestock Waterer Cleans Itself - so you don't have to!



The JUG's Feed-Trap catches debris and keeps it out of the reservoir.
No balls, flaps, or lids to get in the way
The JUG
JUG Model 202 1-hole and 4-hole models also available

The JUG'S self-cleaning design
The JUG'S Feed-Trap™ design prevents feed and other debris from entering the reservoir tank. Each time the animal drinks, any debris in the Feed-Trap is removed The tank stays clean!

No Algae - No slime
Since the JUG's reservoir is light-tight, no algae will grow in it That means no slime build-up

Clean Water = productivity
You know that animals will drink more when the water is clean And more water consumption yields more productivity

Tough, long-lasting construction
The JUG is made of tough, roto-molded plastic It stands up to abuse dished out by livestock It won't chip and pit like concrete

Okla. National Stockyards

Oklahoma City, OK
November 1, 2000
Report Supplied By USDA

Compared to last week: Feeder steers steady. Steer calves 2.00-4.00 higher. Heifers over 550 lbs steady to 3.00 higher; under 550 lbs 3.00-5.00 higher. Demand very good for feeder cattle and steer calves. Demand very good for light heifers suitable for early wheat pastures. Demand moderate for heifers over 550 lbs. Some cattle have been turned-out on a few wheat fields in south central and eastern areas of the state. Large fields to the north and western parts of Oklahoma continue to improve and could be ready for grazing by latter part of November. Rains have been ample since mid October with Pacific storm pattern continuing. Quality of calves plain through attractive. Quality of feeder cattle plain to average. Weigh-ups average to full.

Flesh conditions medium to fleshy, few thin. Slaughter cows and bulls steady to 1.00 higher. Packer demand good. Demand also good for cows returning to the country. Recent rains have greatly improved grazing conditions and reduced cow receipts in Oklahoma and Texas. This reduction in supply has given a boost to slaughter cow prices that is unusual during culling period of the year. Total of 415 cows and bulls sold with 58 percent to packers.

Receipts this week 7,050; last week 7837; last year 6352.

Supply consisted of 44 percent calves and yearlings over 600 lbs; 50 percent calves under 600 lbs; 6 percent cows and bulls. Heifers comprised 37 percent of feeder and calf supply.

Prices follow with weighted average weight and price in parenthesis.

Weekly Dairy Market Outlook

By Ken Bailey
Penn State University
October 27, 2000

U.S. Economy Slows in Third Quarter

- GDP rose just 2.7 percent
- Blocks end the week at $1.02/lb
- Barrels steady at $1.00/lb
- November Class III futures below $9/cwt

The government announced today that the U.S. economy slowed in the third quarter of this year (July - September). The Gross Domestic Product (GDP), an overall measure of the U.S. economy, fell from 5.6 percent growth in the second quarter (April 96 June) to 2.7 percent in the third quarter. Many were expecting a growth rate of 3.5 percent.

A general slowing of the economy is not good news for a dairy economy with surplus milk production Demand for cheese and other dairy products is linked to growth in the general economy. However, higher interest rates would also slow down sales of dairy products. Consumers would have less money in their pockets for eating out if interest rates went up again. A general slowdown in the economy makes it less likely that the Federal Reserve will raise interest rates again this year So the GDP announcement is generally mixed news for the nations dairy economy.

Market activity this week at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange (CME) has been slow. Both block and barrel cheese prices have remained below support levels. Block cheese prices remained at $1.02 per pound, and barrel cheese held steady at $1.00 per pound.

Only 316,800 pounds of process cheese entered the dairy price support program this week In my discussions with industry officials, it is no easy task to move cheese into the Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) via the dairy price support program. You have to have special packaging and you need a USDA inspector. It has been a long time since many cheese processors sold to the government. My guess is that we'll start seeing large quantities of cheese move into the CCC by November

Last week's Cold Storage report may have contributed to a weak outlook for dairy commodity prices. USDA reported that butter stocks as of September 30, 2000 were at 84.8 million pounds, up 19 percent

Precision Ag Management Comes Of Age

MOLINE, Ill. — It's harvest. The smell of fall in the air and more than a little bit of grain chaff, too! A combine hums smoothly in the distance as it makes its way down the field. But when the tractor and grain cart are summoned, there's no one around to jump in and go.

Where are the farm hands?

Because this tractor is driverless, it starts up, uses global positioning satellites (GPS) to locate the combine, and makes its way safely through the field. When it arrives alongside the combine, the grain is deposited into the cart on the go.

Next, the tractor pulls the load back to its resting spot and shuts down. You can bet there are busy farm hands around but they're not in the tractor cab. Satellites and software have just given them a whole new job description.

This concept isn't that far out. Twenty years ago, no one had even heard of GPS or geographic positioning systems — unless you were an engineer at NASA. Today, this is a part of our everyday lives.

Companies such as John Deere must continually think to the future with ideas such as the driverless tractor and much more. However, the real ingenuity comes when a concept becomes viable as a product offering.

Precision agriculture's technology potential has been discussed for several years. But producers and experts now agree that unless a new technology can add dollars to the bottom line today, such hi-tech tools are really no more than a hi-tech diversion.

Technologies such as GPS, real-time yield monitors, multilayer field mapping software, and variable-rate seeding and chemical application systems are readily available on the open market and each promise specific benefits. Yet, Dr. Kent Olson, Department of Applied Economics, University of Minnesota, contends that producers must look beyond individual tools to realize the benefits of precision agriculture. He said producers should think of precision agriculture as a holistic approach to farm management.

"Once you start learning about all the fancy gizmos, it's easy to think about new technology as merely the purchase of another machine — another combine, another tractor, said Olson. "But technology such as precision agriculture is more than mechanical and physical expertise — much more."

In fact, precision agriculture is not a single technology, said Olson, but a "suite of management strategies, technologies, and practices" that farmers can use to improve decision making in agricultural production, marketing, finance, and personnel management.

Olson said the key to making precision agriculture work lies in understanding how to integrate the technology and apply site-specific information in making decisions that meet whole-farm management goals. Generally, those goals involve boosting efficiency and profitability.

John Deere seems to have taken Olson's assessment of precision agriculture to heart, and it recently formed a special program and team of people to deal specifically with creating a precision agriculture package that integrates technology into farm equipment in a manner that meets the farmer's business goals.

Barry Schaffter, vice president of this new precision agriculture group at John Deere called Agricultural Management Solutions (AMS), said, "The potential for this technology is amazing, and part of what we do is research new applications for these tools, such as the driverless tractor, for example. But customers want more than potential, and they tell us that if we can't show them how to save a dime with a new technology, they don't want to put another nickel into the machinery."

To accomplish this task, the AMS group looks at the whole farm to help producers identify solutions in production, equipment management, agronomic practices, and farm business management.

Part of this is creating precision ag components that work together and are easy to operate. After all, if a new technology is not easy to use, it won't be used, stresses Schaffter. But ultimately, said Terry Porter, John Deere AMS marketing manager, the goal of AMS, or any precision agriculture system, is to supply producers with the right kind of information and the means to analyze and apply that information to make better — and more profitable — management decisions.

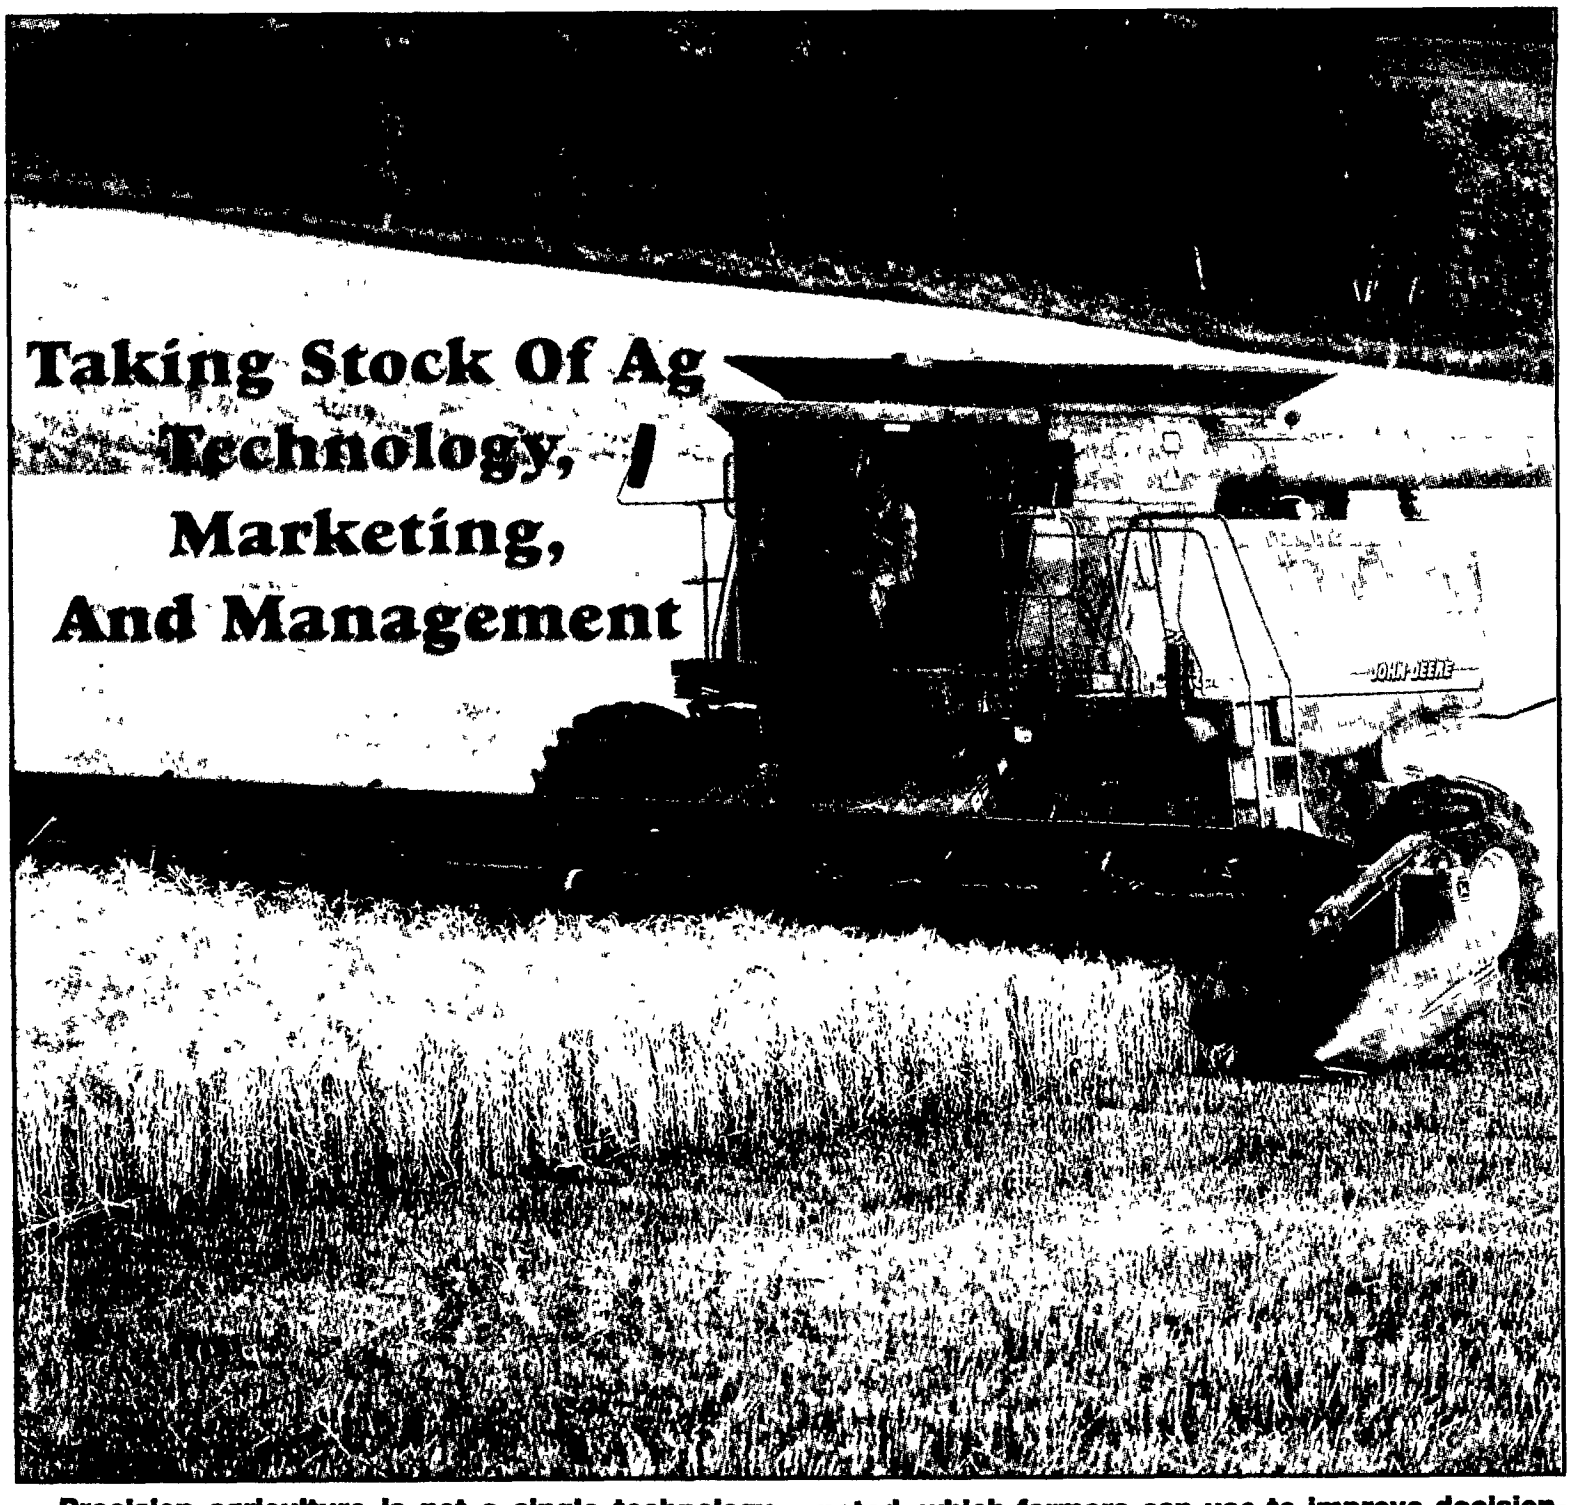
As an example, consider a task as basic as seed selection and purchasing for the coming planting season. With the proper technology, a farmer can turn this simple task into a way to reduce costs, save time, and eventually increase yields.

"In this case, you need a simple way to collect real-time, site-specific information such as field conditions, tillage practices, seed varieties planted, and weather conditions," said Porter. He recommends the John Deere Field Doc data collection system, which works in concert with Deere's StarFire receiver, GreenStar display, and on-board mobile data processor.

"It allows you to make notes on the go, and it's georeferenced, so every time the operator records information or makes changes, the system tags that data to a specific location in the field," said Porter.

To continue this scenario, producers then download data from FieldDoc to their desktop computer and use JDmap Deluxe software to analyze the information. According to Porter, JDmap translates raw field data into site-specific multilayer maps and summaries the producer uses to match seed performance to seeding rates, fertilizer and chemical application rates, tillage practices, soil types, and field drainage.

"One great feature of the software is that it allows op-



Precision agriculture is not a single technology, said Dr. Kent Olsen, Department of Applied Economics, University of Minnesota. It's a "suite of management strategies, technologies, and practices," he noted, which farmers can use to improve decision-making in agricultural production, marketing, finance, and personnel management.

Deere Creates New Management Solutions

LENEXA, Kan. — In order to help farmers better utilize new technology with their equipment and with their operations, John Deere has created an Agricultural Management Solutions (AMS) group. The objective is to integrate technology into farm equipment and to develop agricultural solutions around a customer's business practices.

"We've identified four basic management areas that focus on farming operations," said Barry Schaffter, vice-president, Agricultural Management Solutions (AMS). "These include production activities, equipment management, agronomic and information services, and farm business management."

The AMS group will integrate new technology into farm equipment and offer products and services to help farmers take advantage of this technology to become more productive and profitable.

"With the fast pace of computers and new technology," said Schaffer, "farmers need help on how to best use this technology. Customers have told us that if we can't show them how to save a dime with the new technology, they don't want us to put another nickel into the machinery."

The main goal of AMS will be to help customers reduce input costs, increase yields, gain more efficient use from their equipment, and enhance opportunities for increased income through commodity management.

"John Deere offers a full line of equipment with the latest in high-technology systems," said Schaffter," and we want to offer our customers, worldwide, a full-solution package for their farming operations."

Coming up with new ways to solve on-farm tasks. Key to making precision agriculture work lies in understanding how to integrate the technology and apply site-specific information in making decisions that meet whole-farm management goals.

Deere 4710 Self-Propelled Sprayer Boosts Productivity

LENEXA, Kan. — Built on an innovative four-wheel independent-strut vehicle suspension system, the new 4710 Sprayer from John Deere features increased power, faster field and transport speeds, larger solution and fuel tanks, and increased underframe clearance.

The 4710 Sprayer is powered by a 6.8-liter John Deere Powertech® engine that generates 200 horsepower at a rated speed. When the engine lugs down, in muddy or loose soils, for instance, the turbocharged engine delivers a 10 percent power bulge above rated horsepower (up to 205 hp).

A new four-range hydrostatic transmission allows working speeds up to 20.2 mph and transport speeds up to 29.6 mph. The primary brake is integrated into the Hydrostatic Master Control and a service brake, located at the operator's right foot, provides more braking control.

The 4710 has a 95-gallon fuel tank with an 800-gallon solution tank. For easy accessibility, all solution valves and the solution tank quick-fill are consolidated into two manifolds that can be accessed from the ground.

The patented vehicle suspension system positions a large strut and air spring under each wheel to isolate and absorb bumps and jolts. A scissors-type linkage helps keep the wheel tracking properly, similar to the linkage on an airplane's landing gear.

Three boom suspension systems are designed to maintain uniform spray coverage, helping to reduce spray drift. A large hydraulic accumulator in the lift cylinder controls vertical suspension and cushions bouncing, while a center-pivot roll suspension keeps the boom level with the ground on terraces and sidehills. Yaw suspension ties the left and right wings together around a pivoting central axis to work in concert and prevent the boom from "flapping," even in high-speed turns. Sixty-inches of underframe clearance provides the added space required for many late-season applications such as tasseled corn.

Precision Ag Management

erators to easily share electronic data files or reports with their crop consultants, and even upload the files and consult with suppliers and experts on-line," said Porter. JDmap works in tandem with the VantagePoint Network (www.vantagepoint.com), an on-line information system serving agriculture and the farming community.

The payoff comes when the producer uses this information to determine exactly how many bags of each seed variety is needed, thus reducing overstocks and saving precious working capital and inventory costs. In addition, the farmer can capture early purchase discounts, while at the same time potentially creating maps for variable rate seeding to take advantage of the specific yield characteristics of each acre in a field.

However, this detailed analysis would not be possible with just a yield monitor or a GPS receiver. It takes an integrated package to take raw information and translate it into usable information.

Whether growers are taking in heavy-hitting concepts such as the driverless tractor or deciding whether the latest in technology is a financially sound purchase, how they will manage that new technology is in the forefront of their minds. Olson said information-intensive management practices will become increasingly important as producers adapt to the growing complexity and risk exposure in farming. "Managers need improved information technology, greater information processing capability, and better decision-making aids — that's precision agriculture."

Precision agriculture's technology potential has been discussed for years, but producers and experts say that unless a new technology adds dollars to the bottom line today, such hi-tech tools are really no more than a hi-tech diversion.

New Tools — Old Wisdom

MOLINE, Ill. — Efficiency, control, and accuracy are virtually cliches around the corporate water cooler, but the themes of good business ring as true in a farm field as they do in an urban business park. Some of the latest equipment to hit the market takes these corporate buzzwords to new levels.

Typically, gaining efficiency means sacrificing control and accuracy to a certain extent. But John Deere recently unveiled several new products that it says accomplish all three goals.

One of these products is the 2700 Mulch Ripper, which mulches with a disk, shatters with a ripper, and levels soil with a conditioner — all in one pass. Performing multiple field operations on a single pass saves fuel, limits hours on equipment, reduces soil compaction, and perhaps, most importantly, saves time.

John Deere Tillage Division marketing manager Matt Weinheimer said the new mulch ripper tool is flexible as well as efficient. "This tool allows growers to adjust their tillage for specific field conditions and precisely control the amount of residue left behind."

In addition to improved efficiency, new tillage tools offer options to greatly improve the control of the tool and the depth of tillage. Automatic implement control systems take the guesswork, and cost, out of field operations, allowing farmers to adjust implements from the tractor cab — all with the touch of a keypad.

"The ability to adapt to changing field conditions on-the-go by accurately controlling tool depth from the cab helps the operator manage soil moisture reserves and increase operating speed and efficiency," said Weinheimer.

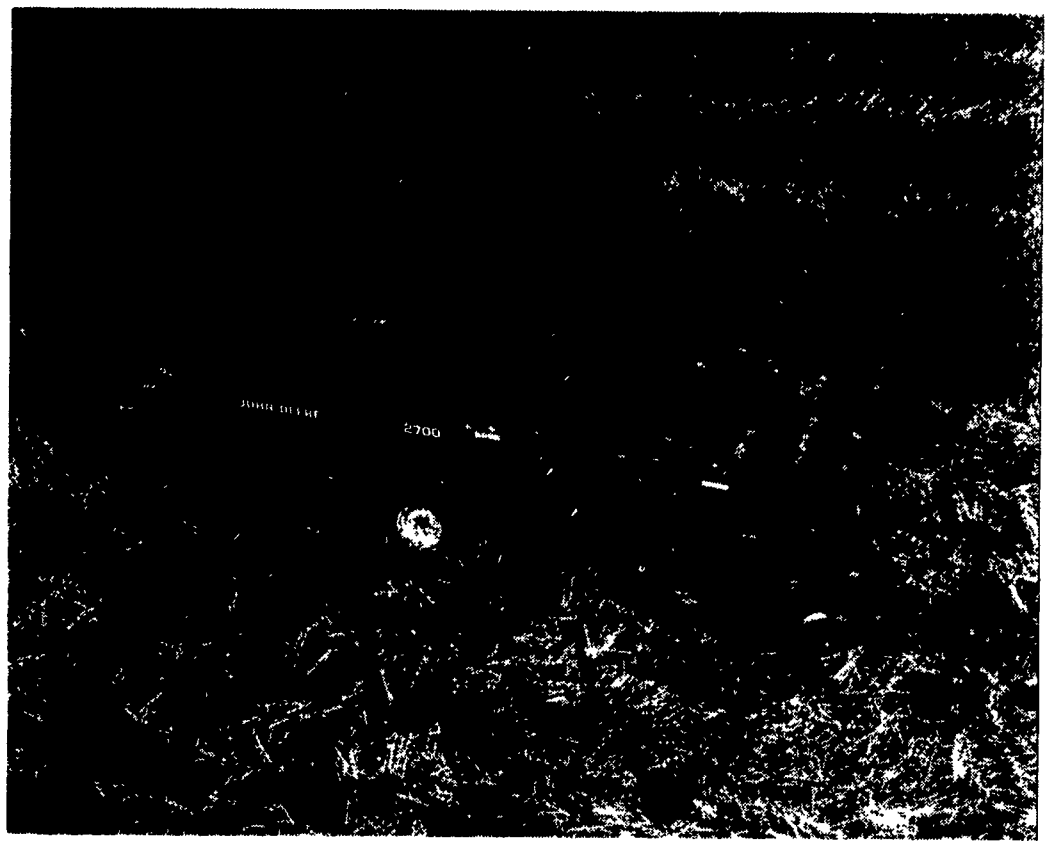
The new 2400 chisel plow from John Deere combines depth control technology such as AccuDepth, a floating hitch and TruePosition cushion standards in one piece of equipment. The AccuDepth system's in-cab digital display shows the depth in inches for each frame segment and provides automatic, on-the-go correction for primary and intermediate chisel depths and side-to-side leveling.

New electronics also play a role in tillage accuracy, because though some people are blessed with an inherent sense of direction, most everyone else could use a little guidance. In addition, even the best driver can get a little off track after hours in the cab. That's where parallel tracking guidance systems can make a difference.

Parallel tracking systems use GPS signals to keep a tractor on course throughout a field, reducing passes and saving time and money.

According to Terry Porter of John Deere's Agricultural Management Solutions (AMS) group, John Deere machines utilize the StarFire GPS receiver to support parallel tracking, helping the operator — through both visual and audible signals — maintain a perfectly straight path relative to the first pass down the field.

"Using this system, operators can apply fertilizer or chemical day and night without worrying about skips and overlaps. Or they can hook up the widest implement and drive straight down the field without having to constantly pivot in the seat to check the tool's position," said Porter.



New tillage tools perform multiple field operations on a single pass, saving fuel, limiting hours on equipment, reducing soil compaction, and, perhaps most importantly, saving time.

Fall Tillage Promotes Good Soil Management

MOLINE, Ill. — Fall soil management using proper tillage techniques can reap significant benefits when spring rolls around.

Generally there are three objectives for fall tillage programs, said John Deere tillage division marketing manager Matt Weinheimer: (1) eliminate compaction, (2) enhance incorporation of nutrients and chemicals, and (3) manage surface residue.

"Fracturing the upper soil layer in the fall promotes water and nutrient infiltration and facilities root penetration, and mechanical incorporation promotes uniform and efficient distribution of residues and nutrients," said Weinheimer.

When selecting a primary tillage tool, Weinheimer suggests that producers consider several factors, including soil type, residue preference, conservation tillage requirements, and tractor power.

Noninversion tillage tools such as disks, chisel plows, mulch tillers, V-rippers, and disk rippers offer the most flexibility.

"These tools are designed to till deep, but disturb as little as possible on the surface, which is ideal when you want to leave the surface rough to absorb moisture or warm the soil," said Weinheimer. "With adjustments and optional attachments, you can control the amount of residue left in place after the tillage pass."

To limit soil compaction and enhance operational efficiency, Weinheimer recommends using a combination tool such as the John Deere 2700 Mulch Ripper, which mulches with a disk, shatters with a ripper, and levels soil with a conditioner — all in one pass.

"This tool does three jobs in one pass and gives the operator complete control of the soil profile. It mulches using fully adjustable disk gangs at the front. The ripper standards maximize soil-fracturing and enhance residue flow, and the rear disk conditioner provides soil leveling and optimal residue sizing," said Weinheimer.

Pa. Farm Bureau To Conduct 50th Annual Meeting

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — The 50th Annual Meeting of the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau (PFB) will take place Nov. 13-15 here at the Hershey Lodge and Convention Center.

Several hundred farmers, including 172 voting delegates, will gather for the three-day event which will culminate in the election of leaders and the setting of policy positions for the coming year on agricultural issues. This year's annual meeting will feature special programs and activities on Tuesday, Nov. 14 in celebration of the farm organization's 50th anniversary.

PFB was organized as the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association by a group of about 40 farmers in November 1950. PFB now represents more than 28,000 farm and rural families in 54 county farm bureaus. It is part of the nation's largest general farm organization, the 4.9-million member American Farm Bureau Federation.

Voting delegate sessions will be held each day of the annual meeting to deliberate on policy proposals developed from the organization's grass-roots level. Delegates will also be electing the organization's president and eight board members for two-year terms. PFB's Nominating Committee has nominated Guy Donaldson of Adams County for re-election to the organization's top post.

Information conferences are also scheduled each day. Monday's agenda will feature sessions on biotechnology and long-term health care. Tuesday's conferences will cover farm safety for children and a special anniversary session on "PFA/PFB: Five Decades of Progress" featuring past and present leaders of the organization. A motivational conference entitled "Celebrating the Dash" will take place Wednesday, Nov. 15.

PFB's Young Farmer and Rancher Discussion Meet competition will be Tuesday of the annual meeting. Judges will select a winner based on his or her ability to express ideas and opinions on pre-selected topics.

PFB President Donaldson will review the organization's accomplishments over the past year during the President's Address to the Annual Meeting on Monday. Richard D. Harris, American Farm Bureau's chief administration officer and secretary-treasurer, will speak at a special 50th anniversary luncheon Tuesday. State House Democratic Whip Michael Veon (D-14th Dist.) will address a breakfast meeting of FARMER, PFB's political action committee, Wednesday.

PFB will present several awards during the annual meeting. The winner of the young farmer and rancher achievement awards will be announced at Tuesday's luncheon. The Distinguished Service to Agriculture Award and All-Star County award for the top county farm bureau will be presented during Tuesday evening's banquet. The winner of PFB's young farmer and rancher discussion meet will also be announced Tuesday evening.

Question: Are there things we can do to prevent mycotoxins in this year's feed?

Unfortunately this question came about the time most corn silage was finished. For those of you with long season varieties or the desire to refill we can talk about some sound approaches to silo filling. This is also the same time of year to be ensiling that last bit of alfalfa or grass crop. For Filling:

- Clean out old feed and if possible disinfect surfaces.
- Harvest at proper maturity to obtain highest quality feed.
- Harvest at proper moisture to ensure good packing and proper fermentation.
- Fill as fast as possible and pack properly in bunk silos.

A judgment call needs to be made to establish a balance between proper moisture and proper maturity. Moisture at time of ensiling must take precedent over maturity if we are going to have proper fermentation with corn silage.

Ensiling and storage:

- Cover silo with plastic attempting to eliminate as much oxygen as possible.
- Recheck covers on a regular basis and repair holes. Covers on tower silos become loose as silage settles. Weighting the edges or persistent tucking can help with this.
- Consider using inoculants or preservatives as added insurance to feed quality.

Storage and feeding:

- Silage remains silage all year if the above procedures are a yearly practice and not just thought of at time of ensiling.
- In bunks, feed evenly from face and use four to six inches per day.
- Always dig a wedge from the bottom first and then knock feed down from above it until you're at the top.
- This will prevent cracks and air entry back through the feeding face.
- In tower silos feed five to six inches until you reach well-packed silage and then three to four inches.
- Remove spoiled feed from feeding areas promptly so good feed doesn't become contaminated.

There are not new ideas but will serve as reminders that feed quality is a year-round job. Doing all the above should lessen the chances of a toxin problem.

I would encourage everyone to assess the feed management changes made in the last 20 years and then adapt new strategies that will help deal with the problems that come along with new management. In today's modern dairies that use wet feeds in higher proportions than ever before, toxins will be a problem because a nice layer of mold forms on top every time we stop filling for a period. We don't see it as it blends in with other feed coming out. Bunks that aren't covered certainly are a potential spot to find molds and toxins. With toxins being very water soluble, every time it rains toxins are moved down into our pile of feed.

Even silage bales are suspect to toxins. Often silage bales are made when the weather doesn't allow us to make the feed in any other way. This weather is also what allows molds and toxins to develop on standing crops.

Follow good feed making procedures. Test for toxins regularly when conditions and feeding styles promote toxin development. Look for telltale signs of toxin activity such as reduced dry matter intakes, cystic ovaries, increased SCC and clinical mastitis, abortions, decreasing cow health. As always contact your nutritionist and veterinarian to solve the problem. Lastly, my phone line is always available to you.

Conference Honors Protection, Conservation Partnerships

MICHELLE RANCK
Farming Staff

VALLEY FORGE (Chester Co.) — This week the State Conservation Commission and the Pennsylvania Association of Conservation Districts Inc. (PACD) conducted a joint conference to bring together experts, convene committees, disseminate information and reports, and give out awards for outstanding efforts in conservation for the past year.

Hosted by Bucks, Chester, Delaware, and Montgomery conservation districts, the 53rd joint annual conference convened at the Hilton Valley Forge.

The event featured workshops and sessions which addressed issues such as PennDOT's erosion and sediment control program, planning tools for storm water management, geographic information system (GIS), stream corridor restoration, watershed improvement projects, funding opportunities, and an update on education and youth developments.

A report from the PACD Rural and Urban Land Use Committee provided an overview of the various programs under PACD. Berks County Conservation District Director Lyn Moser gave an update on "Transfer of Development Rights" (TDR) which saved a farm from development in Washington Township, Berks County.

Although 13 TDRs were already enacted on farms that were sold, the township decided not to enforce their own ordinances, said Moser.

"We sued twice, but decided it was a disheartening way to manage, so we came up with the idea of partnerships," said Moser. "It's a good program if you have the support of the supervisors."

After developing partnerships, however, with the Berks County Community Foundation and the Berks County Preservation Board, local developers, and local environmental groups, a farm with an approved development plan was actually saved from development.

"We were able to show the developer that he can cash out with groups throwing money into the pot and by showing him the advantage of capital gains," said Moser.

"We want to show people that you don't have to give up," she said. The farm will continue to stay in agricultural use.

Another topic, the CleanWays program, is an active, growing conservation organization. Under CleanWays, local businesses donate trucks, landfills donate free dumping, and local volunteers are mobilized to clean up trash. Thirteen Pennsylvania counties host the program begun in 1989. To date, 110 illegal dump sites, 100 littered roads, three trails, one park, and one waterway have been "adopted" through Pennsylvania CleanWays.

The organization also publishes a newsletter highlighting cleanup and recycling activities. A booklet, videos, an education activity book for schoolchildren and a display board are available for public education through Pennsylvania CleanWays.

Meeting attendees agreed that the involvement, education, and grass-roots voice of "local people" are essential to conservation efforts.

Following Perry County's lead, Lebanon County Conservation District has gotten good feedback on the six signs on farms preserved by the Agriculture Land Preservation Board and administered by the conservation district.

In Westmoreland County, the conservation district helped arm 100 people with information on the cost of development. Because of this citizen participation, a rezoning law detrimental to agriculture was stopped.

During the meeting, Cumberland County's open space preservation plan and Sen. Jim Gerlach's Senate Bill 300, a proposed amendment to the Pennsylvania Municipalities Planning Code to encourage farm preservation, revitalize urban centers, and facilitate the viability of ag operations were briefly discussed.

Meeting participants also decided that conservation districts have a responsibility to educate the public about ag security areas.

"Once a farm is preserved, that's just the beginning. The real meat-and-potatoes comes in monitoring the legal transactions that follow. It's a very bureaucracy-intensive program," said meeting facilitator Chuck Wertz.

Also at the conference, several presenters highlighted education efforts, which include the new package, "Sustaining Penn's Woods." The program complements the national "Project Learning Tree" program. A CD ROM, classroom activities, and video educate students about forest and land use practices.

Theresa Alberici, Pennsylvania Game Commission, believes that environmental topics have an important place in the classroom.

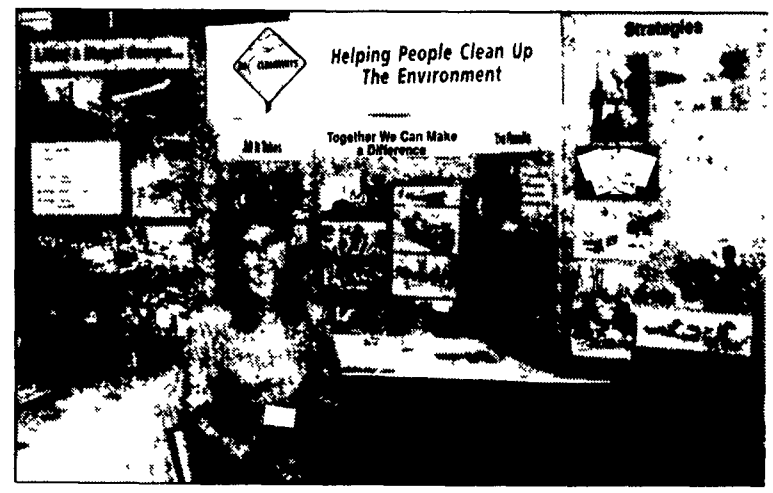
"These are things that affect us all the time. If you live in a watershed and drink water, you have a relationship to the watershed," said Alberici. "This disputes the idea that you have to live in the forest to study the environment."

Allan Wood, NRCS state office, informed conference participants about corridor restoration measures. Branch packing, dead or live stakes, brush layering, and biotextiles provide stability needed to keep a steam bed in place in conservation efforts.

The focus is now on natural stream design, said Wood, and "using rock in strategic places to center water back into the stream to help the stream make it through the meanders."

Instead of locking a stream in place by simply shoring up the existing bends of a water body, efforts include using old photographs and records to re-create a stream and protect the banks.

The Ron and Kathy Kline of Y-Run Farms, Bradford County, accept the Pennsylvania Chesapeake Bay Clean Water Farm Award.



Sue Snyder recently began working for CleanWays, a group organized to remove trash, facilitate recycling, and educate the public. Begun in 1989, the group mobilizes local citizens and business to protect, restore, and maintain the outdoors. "When you get the volunteers involved, they have a sense of stewardship and ownership and keep an eye on it," said Snyder.

Root wads have become an option to eliminate undercut banks and reestablish a creek bank "the way nature would have it," said Wood. The bottom 15-17 feet of a tree is taken and placed in a stream bank with ballast on top for security.

According to Wood, no single answer will preserve every creek bank. Instead a combination of different techniques should be used to preserve a bank.

For instance, instead of completely avoiding using excavation in a steam, Wood believes that by getting an excavator in and out of the stream, the sediment damage is far less detrimental than a year of allowing the bank to continuing to fall in. "All disciplines should be involved," said Wood.

During the awards luncheon, individuals, businesses, and conservation districts were honored for outstanding conservation efforts.

The Goodyear Award recognized the partnership efforts between a conservation district and landowners for conservation of natural resources. This year's winner, the Lancaster County Conservation District, has grown to 19 people since its beginning in 1950. The district hosts nine active and 12 associate board members. The agriculture division has helped to add terracing, stream bank fencing, waterways, and tracts of permanent vegetation across the Pennsylvania landscape.

In addition, the team has added 54 manure storage facilitates and $4.5 million in assistance to landowners from Chesapeake Bay programs. This past year the district hired its first watershed coordinator, besides holding a conservation expo for public education, sending out the "Conservation Crier" newsletter, and hosting 77 teams in the Envirothon in 1999. The district has also conducted a conservation school for 21 years.

The Conservation Farmer of the Year must not only establish but also maintain a conservation plan. Leonard and Bonnie Jo Greek, along with daughters Stormi and Stevie Anna of Ridge Hill Farm, Red Lion, took home the honor this year.

A 400-acre dairy and crop farm, Ridge Hill features contour strips of corn and hay, divisions to slow runoff, runways to filter runoff and slow erosion, and facilities to collect and spread dairy manure under a voluntary management plan.

Numerous awards honored a volunteer, conservation organization, educator, legislator, county commissioner, and efforts made by organizations for sedimentation and pollution control, forest resource management, and urban conservation efforts.

The special conservation service award went to Abner J. Housenecht, Lancaster County. Housenecht, said to be on of the founding fathers of conservation, has put his touch on the landscape of Lancaster during his years in the USDA Soil Conservation Service, where he laid out conservation programs on dozens of county farms, which included miles of waterways, terracing, and contours.

"The 40-plus years that I worked with farmers to establish conservation practices were very rewarding," said Housenecht. He compared himself to Johnny Appleseed, spreading conservation seeds across the land.

"It was not hard to sow to the people in Lancaster County. They normally came to us," said Housenecht.

The Pennsylvania Chesapeake Bay Clean Water Farm Awards, sponsored by the Chesapeake Bay Education Office, went to Jack and Donna Coleman, Cherry Crest dairy farm, Lancaster County; Robert Heid, Cambria County; and Ron and sons Gary and Glenn Kline and families, Y-Run Bradford County.

The Colemans, Strasburg, are perhaps best known for the "Amazing Maize Maze" which draws thousands of visitors to their farm each year. Besides taking the opportunity to teach the public about farming, the Colemans also have 3,200 feet of terraces in place on the farm, besides an environmentally-friendly manure-handling system.

Their farm consists of 70 milking cows, 250,000 broilers raised per year, and 175 acres of crop land. They began dairy farming in Lancaster County in 1987 and have had their farm management plan in place since 1988.

In 1990, the Colemans installed a liquid waste storage unit that holds 550,000 gallons of

Glickman Announces $300 Million Bioenergy Program

WASHINGTON, D.C. — U.S. Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman announced details of a new $300 million program to encourage expanded production of environmentally-friendly fuels made from corn, soybeans, and other crops.

The program, which was initially proposed in President Clinton's 2001 budget as part of the farm safety net, will help expand markets for agricultural commodities and promote use of biofuels like ethanol and soy-based biodiesel.

"This program will help us tap into a huge domestic energy reserve — our family farms," said Glickman. "Encouraging the use of bioenergy benefits America's farmers while improving our energy security and helping to protect the environment."

Biofuels offer renewable, clean, domestic sources of fuel that can create new markets for America's farmers. Ethanol, practically non-existent 20 years ago, now accounts for 1.2 percent of the nation's gasoline supply. Already, 567 million bushels of corn, over 5 percent of U.S. production, are grown annually for use in biofuels. President Clinton issued an executive order last summer that set a goal of tripling the U.S. use of renewable energy.

Under the program, USDA will make cash payments to bioenergy companies that increase their purchases of corn, soybeans and other commodities to expand production of ethanol, biodiesel or other biofuels. The program will provide higher payments to small and new-to-market processors, including cooperatives, to encourage the expansion of domestic bioenergy production capacity. USDA will provide up to $150 million for the program this fiscal year and another $150 million in fiscal 2002.

The new regulation, under development during this past year, was finalized under a USDA rule-making process. A proposed rule was issued this summer, followed by a public comment period. Sign-up for the program will begin in December. Further information will be available on the Web at http://www.fsa.usda.gov/daco/bioenergy/bioenergy.htm .

Glickman also announced that USDA is soliciting proposals for pilot projects that use harvested vegetation to produce energy. Biomass, plant materials containing cellulose and lignin, can be burned, converted into combustible gas, or used to produce liquid fuels. The land must be enrolled in USDA's Conservation Reserve Program and the vegetative cover, such as grass, must be an approved cover for use in the conservation program. Pilot projects will be for a minimum period of 10 years and the total acreage per project may not exceed 50,000 acres.

The maximum acreage for all pilot projects will not exceed 250,000 acres. No more than one project will be approved in any state. Those interested in submitting proposals for biomass projects should contact their State Farm Service Agency.

Maryland Farm Bureau Nominates Hughes For National Award

RANDALLSTOWN, Md. — The Maryland Farm Bureau board of directors recently nominated H. John Hughes of Snow Hill, Md. for the national Excellence In Crop Advising Award.

Each state Farm Bureau nominates a certified crop adviser (CCA) to the American Farm Bureau Federation for consideration for the national award.

Hughes is an employee of Keen Consulting, Inc. and performs scouting reports for cotton, small grains, soybeans, corn, peppers, potatoes, tomatoes, and sweet corn. He also develops nutrient management plans as a certified nutrient management consultant in Maryland and Virginia, and holds a commercial pesticide license in Maryland, Virginia, and Delaware.

Hughes will be honored at the Maryland Farm Bureau Annual Convention in December. The presentation will take place during the banquet Tuesday evening, Dec. 5, at the Sheraton Fontainebleau in Ocean City, Md.

The Excellence in Crop Advising Award honors the CCA who strives to provide the best service in nutrient management, soil and water conservation, integrated pest management, and crop production. The winner of the national award will be honored at the American Farm Bureau Federation Annual Convention in Orlando, Fla. in January.

USDA Protects Six New Plant Varieties

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The USDA has issued certificates of protection to developers of six new varieties of seed-reproduced plants. They include lettuce, pea, pepper, potato, and watermelon.

The six certificates are being issued under the Plant Variety Protection Act. The certificates require that the varieties be new, distinct, uniform, and stable. The owners will have the exclusive right to reproduce, sell, import, and export their products in the United States for the duration of protection.

The six certificates are the Snow Green and Snow Wind varieties of pea, developed by Novartis Seeds, Inc., Boise, Idaho; the 504 Green and Green Day varieties of lettuce, developed by Seminis Vegetable Seeds, Inc., Oxnard, Calif.; the Tift 8593 variety of millet, developed by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, Agricultural Research Service, Tifton, Ga.; and the MSL 501 C variety of rapeseed, developed by Svalof Weibull AB and Norddeutsche Pflanzenzucht Hans-Georg Lemke KG, Svalov, Sweden.

USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service administers the Plant Variety Protection Act, which provides time limited marketing protection to developers of new and distinct seed-reproduced and tuber-propagated plants ranging from farm crops to flowers. For additional information about the Plant Variety Protection Act, contact the Plant Variety Protection Office at (301) 504-5518 (tel.), (301) 504-5291 (fax), or www.ams.usda.gov/science/pvp.htm (Website).

FUTURES MARKETS

from a year ago Stocks of American Cheese were 557 6 million pounds, up 18 percent from a year ago.

Total cheese stocks were 735 7 million pounds, up 13 percent from a year ago

The futures market at the CME had some dire predictions for Class III prices today. The Class III futures as of October 27 reported a settlement price of $10 04 per cwt for October 2000, $8 87 per cwt for November 2000, and $9 33 per cwt for December 2000 Thereafter the market is expecting the Class III price to average $9 78 per cwt for the first quarter of 2001, and $10 00 per cwt for the second quarter of 2001.

The Class IV futures settlement prices at the CME as of October 27, 2000 were $11.79 per cwt for October 2000, $11.65 per cwt for November 2000, and $11 24 per cwt for December 2000 The Class IV settlement prices averaged $10 89 per cwt for the first quarter of 2001 and $11 18 for the second quarter of 2001

I am forecasting milk prices will be relatively stagnant for the remainder of this year Prices won't begin to show improvements until we get past the spring flush next year Thereafter we can expect a normal fall rally if the economy remains strong and we get normal summer weather I am also expecting milk cow numbers will begin to decline in the second quarter of 2001 Look for annual average milk prices to rise about $0.28 per cwt in 2001 over 2000

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Dairy farm managers will have an opportunity to learn more about the challenges and opportunities that come with managing a workforce composed of people from various cultures. A one-day conference entitled "Managing a Hispanic Workforce" will be held Jan. 16, 2001 in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania and again on Jan. 18, 2001 in Rochester, New York. The Cooperative Extension faculty and staff of Cornell University and Penn State University are working together to organize the conference.

Dairy producers currently employing a Hispanic workforce, those who are considering workers from another culture, and industry and extension professionals should plan to attend the conference. It will be a unique opportunity to learn from people who have experience with cross-cultural situations. Knowledgeable speakers and workshop leaders will present reliable information, and panel members will provide practical employment related examples.

Conference participants will gain a greater understanding and appreciation for the Hispanic culture. They will learn methods of organization and communication that will help workers and managers become an effective Multi-Cultural Team. In addition, participants will learn about regulations governing alien workers and ways to avoid legal problems.

To learn more about the conference, contact one of the following people: David Grusenmeyer, PRO-DAIRY at 607-255-0756, dcg10@cornell.edu; Tammy Perkins, Dairy Alliance at 1-888-373-PADA, tammy@dairyalliance.org; Richard Stup, Dairy Alliance at 814-652-6430, richstup@psu.edu. To register, contact conference coordinator Dee Brothers at 607-255-4478, dab2@cornell.edu.

SCHNUPP'S Flame KISSED

ROASTING IS SUPERIOR TO OTHER METHODS OF HEAT PROCESSED GRAIN

~ IT'S ECONOMICAL - The cost to operate a flame roaster is lower than other types of processing equipment This makes roasting grain a more efficient method

~ IT PURIFIES - Only a flame roaster can effectively remove molds and reduce toxins to tolerant levels As the individual grain rotates through the open flame, the mold dust around it is destroyed

~ IT'S UNIFORM - Having the grain pass through the open flame and properly steeped, gives it a uniform treatment

~ IT'S PROFITABLE - Custom roasting on your farm
*Gives you the ability to feed your own grain, not someone elses
* Eliminates trucking expenses
* No mill charges shrinkage, storage and handling
* When grain needs to be purchased, you can have it roasted on your farm and know how it is processed

Pre-Year End Tax Planning

The end of the year is fast approaching, and do you know what your tax liabilities will be? To become better prepared for your tax liabilities and possibly help save you money in taxes, schedule a pre-year end tax planning meeting with your accountant

It is advisable to meet with your accountant during the month of November to review your year-to-date financial records and project December's numbers in order to forecast your tax liability This pre-year end meeting will allow enough time to make any final business transactions or plan other options to level your taxable income before the December 31 deadline

With nearly all farmers on a cash basis accounting system, you pay taxes on the difference between your receipts and expenses In farming there can be a large volatility from year to year on both your receipts as well as your expenses A farmer's tax reporting process, (schedule F), is one of the most liberal in the business community. This can allow you to level out your taxable income over several years and remain in the same tax bracket, rather than pay a large amount in taxes one year and very little the next

One strategy to take in leveling your income is to defer income to the next year and prepay expenses or show income early and defer expenses to the next year, depending on your financial situation Planning allows you to manage which tax bracket you want your income taxed, and even allows income that otherwise would have been taxed to be sheltered if the income is pushed into a subsequent loss year The following example illustrates how tax planning can benefit a farming operation·

Farmer Brown, a farm proprietor, has 2 children and files a joint tax return with his spouse Their 2000 taxable income before tax planning is $54,000, and they expect their 2001 taxable income to be significantly less Therefore, their tax planner advises them to defer income and prepay expenses of $10,000 to reduce their 2000 taxable income to $44,000, which is the top end of the 15% federal tax bracket. Without planning, the Brown's combined marginal tax rate would be 47% (28% federal, 4% PA and local, and 15% social security); therefore, by prepaying expenses or deferring income of $10,000, the Browns save approximately $4,700 of tax.

Those that don't plan claim that the profit gets taxed the following year, so why bother? First, the time value of money is an important item to remember. Having the tax money in your pocket to invest back into your operation or into a retirement plan (see below) instead of the government's pocket for one year is valuable. Second, if this year's profit is pushed into a lower bracket next year, the tax savings generated by the difference in tax brackets is permanent. Third, if you expect a loss next year, the profit pushed into next year is offset by the loss and never taxed.

The most common method of managing income is to delay or accelerate selling crops. In a dairy operation, delaying the receipt of a milk check is more of a challenge, especially if you have an automatic deposit feature. If you receive Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) loans or crop damage insurance proceeds, there are some planning options available as to when this income is reported.

Another approach to managing taxable income would be to use a retirement planning option This might involve placing money in a SIMPLE plan, IRA, 401K, or any other retirement planning tool Be aware that a contribution to your own retirement plan saves income tax, but does not reduce your social security tax However, this planning technique will help you secure and diversify your retirement wealth as well as reduce your taxable income

Common methods of managing your expenses include prepaying or delaying payment of feed, supplies and fertilizer. There are limits on how much may be prepaid so consult with your accountant concerning these rules. Another available tool to avoid high taxes is first year depreciation or Section 179. With this special depreciation election, you may show an expense of up to $20,000 on equipment purchased. Another method is to pay your children, provided the labor and hourly wage is legitimate. No social security tax is due on wages paid by farmers operating as sole proprietorships to their children under age 18. In addition, children do not have to pay federal income tax on their first $4,400 of wages because of the standard deduction allowed on their tax returns, so it's a great way of sheltering income within the family.

As with any tax planning decision, be cautious to not leave the "tax cart" get in front of the "good business horse." In other words, consider whether the tax planning decisions you are making still make good business sense. For example, if you are considering prepaying feed and prices are high in December, and you can do much better economically buying feed next year when feed prices are anticipated to be lower, consider this as you make your year-end tax planning decisions.

If you do not already have a pre-year end meeting scheduled with your accountant, consider doing so this month. This not only allows enough time for tax planning but also will encourage you to maintain a better record keeping system and reduce the shock of your tax bill come February If your time is limited this fall, it might be tempting to spend any extra time with the harvest fieldwork, but proper planning of your finances can save you far more money than the few extra bushels of grain you might harvest.

Farm Accepts Ag Plastics For Recycling

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

LEOLA (Lancaster Co.) — If you're looking for a way to dispose of agriculture plastic, Dan Zook, located here, may have a solution.

Zook is accepting polyethylene plastic at his farm on 183 South Farmersville Road. Plastic is being shipped to a company, Trex Manufacturing, located in Winchester, Va. The company mixes the plastic with sawdust to make materials for decking.

The company wants the plastic as clean as possible, noted Jeff Stoltzfus, Eastern Lancaster County School District Young Farmer Program adviser.

Stoltzfus noted the company can handle some soil and moisture contamination in their processes. There is a $25 per ton charge to take the plastic.

Zook can accept plastic mulch, ag bag plastic, bale wrap, silage covers, greenhouse covers, and shrink wrap.

Zook can't accept plastic twine, Remay row covers, molded plastic (greenhouse pots and trays), milk or water jugs, or pesticide or other containers.

Drip tape and ag mulch should be baled separately, Stoltzfus noted. Scales are available at the farm to weigh each load.

Zook will accept plastic during the day Wednesdays throughout the winter.

The plastic is baled using a cardboard baler that presses bales into an area 30 inches thick by five feet long, according to Zook. The plastic is shipped to the company by trailer load.

Zook can be reached at his answering service at (717) 656-4422. He is located on South Farmersville Road about one mile off Rt. 23. From Rt. 23, he's the third farm on the right.

York FSA Reminds County Farmers Of Three Announced Programs

YORK (York Co.) — County producers of oilseeds, wool, and mohair may obtain price support coverage under three programs created under recent legislation.

• Oilseeds — Soybean producers who grew a 2000 crop may apply for a market loss payment between Oct. 16, 2000 and Jan. 12, 2001. Established producers receive payments based on the highest of 1997, 1998, or 1999 acreage. New producers receive payments based on their share of the 2000 planted acreage. The higher of the actual yield from 1997, 1998, 1999, or the county average is used in the calculation process.

• Wool And Mohair Market Loss Assistance Program — Because of re-occurring low market prices for wool products, county producers can apply for this one-time payment. Support is available to wool and mohair producers who sheared wool or mohair from Jan. 1, 1999 through Dec. 31, 1999. The payment rate is 20 cents per pound for wool and 40 cents per pound for mohair. Eligible wool must have documentation for poundage certified that was produced from stock owned for 30 days at time of shearing in 1999 and shorn in the U.S. The sign-up period is Oct. 10, 2000 through Dec. 29, 2000.

• Lamb Meat Adjustment Assistance Program — Feeder and slaughter lambs marketed between Aug. 1, 2000 and July 31, 2002 may receive $3 and $5 per head respectively on lambs raised for slaughter and owned for 30 calendar days continuously. Slaughter lambs must meet USDA requirements of Quality Grade Choice or Prime, Yield Grade 2, score average choice on muscling confirmation score, and have a hot carcass weight of 55 to 75 pounds. These lambs must be evaluated and certified by an AMS agent or representative.

Producers can self-certify the eligibility requirements by utilizing a notification system developed by USDA and obtaining feeder lamb ear tags.

County producers interested in any of these programs can contact the York County Farm Service Agency at 120 Pleasant Acres Road. Call (717) 755-2966 x-2.

Weaber Joins American Simmental Association Staff

BOZEMAN, Mont. — The American Simmental Association (ASA) has recently appointed Robert L. Weaber as the new Interim Director of Performance Programs.

"The ASA is widely recognized for its aggressive research agenda, especially in the areas of multi-breed and carcass evaluation. In my duties, I plan to utilize my broad industry knowledge and practical problem solving approach to help in the ongoing effort to improve Simmental influenced genetics and the beef industry," Weaber remarked.

Weaber hails from a cattle and sheep operation near Beulah, Colorado. He is a graduate of Colorado State University with a Bachelor's degree in Animal Science and a Master's degree in Agriculture-Beef Industry Leadership.

Previously, Weaber served on the American Gelbvieh Association (AGA) staff in Westminster, Colorado. New Ag, Resource Economics Department Chair At Maryland

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Bruce L. Gardner, Distinguished University Professor at the University of Maryland, is the new chairperson of the Department of Agricultural and Resource Economics in the university's College of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

A University Park resident, Gardner has been a faculty member at Maryland since 1981 and director of the Maryland Center for Agricultural and Natural Resource Policy since 1996. He will continue in the latter role for the present, along with his new duties as department chair.

An Illinois native, Gardner grew up on a dairy farm northwest of Chicago that is still operated by his brother. He was graduated from the University of Illinois in 1964 with a bachelor's degree in agricultural economics.

Four years later, he had earned a doctorate degree in economics at the University of Chicago. His major professor there was the world-renowned Dr. Theodore W. Schultz.

dairy manure. The facility not only protects water quality but curtails unnecessary odor. They have also taken on several voluntary management practices to help curb runoff from the farm. Through the Chesapeake Bay Program, they voluntarily participate in a program to control barnyard runoff of 13,240 square feet.

Gerald Hiestand, who accepted the award for the family, recounted that Coleman's reaction to winning the award was, "Why now? I'm not finished yet." The attitude of never being done, of continual progress, is crucial to conservation efforts, noted Hiestand.

The Heid farm in Loretto, Cambria County won recognition for battling the runoff, mud, and manure problems caused by concrete. Now milkhouse filter area system plus a concrete nutrient management plan help take care of the problem.

The waste water goes to a 900-gallon tank for the solids to settle. The tank then flushes every 3-4 days. Nutrients filter from the pipe while the water filters slowly out. In addition, the farm has an 85-foot sod waterway, a livestock exclusion fence, 500 feet of subsurface drains, contour farming, crop rotation, a 6-month manure storage facility, and contour strip cropping.

The 400-acre dairy farm hosts 70 milking cows, 90 replacement heifers, and 20 calves.

The Ron and Kathy Kline of Y-Run Farm in Troy, Bradford County, began conservation efforts in 1978. Since then the farm has added 21,000 feet of storm water diversion, 440 acres of contour strip cropping, contours, no-till plowing, and a milkhouse waste treatment system.

Three manure pits handle 90 percent of the manure through the system and nearly eliminate the need for winter spreading. The manure storage tank has greatly reduced the amount of spring runoff coming from the farm. Also large rocks stabilize the Kline's stream that also hosts a planted vegetation corridor.

The Klines have partnered with his sons Glen and Gary and their families for the past 10 years. Y-Run Farms cover 600 acres cropped with corn and alfalfa. In addition they milk 425 cows and own 300 head of young stock in the dairy operation.

"It's just good, solid farming practices," said Kline.

Other awards given included the Watershed Protect Award, given to the Conoduguinet Creek Watershed Association of Cumberland County. Robert Kready Mowrer, Lancaster County, received the Ann Rudd Saxman Conservation Volunteer of the Year. The Conservation Organization of the Year award went to the Northern Allegheny Conservation Association, Warren County.

Steve Walker, Cambria County received the Media Conservation Award. The Conservation Educator of the Year went to Richard McLaughlin, Bucks County. Twin Oaks Gun Club, Dauphin County, won the M.K. Goddard Forest Resource Management Award. Stephen Ritupper Jr., Northampton County, received the William Lange Urban Conservation Award.

The Legislator Recognition Award went to Rep. Jim Lynch, Warren County. County Commissioner District Director of the Year was Fred Soisson, M.D., Cambria County. Glenn O. Hawbaker, Inc., Indiana County, won the Erosion and Sedimentation Pollution Control Award.

First place for the annual report of the year went to the Snyder Conservation District, second place to the Bucks Conservation District, and third place to the Erie Conservation District. The PACD Auxiliary Awards, the poster contest winners, were Raymond Heromin, Northumberland County for the K-1 division, Jennifer Evanisky, Mifflin County, grades 2-3 division, Robert Heinrich, Sullivan County in the grades 4-6 division, Roxanne Barton, Clinton County, won the grades 7-9 division, and Michael Kensinger, Blair County had the winning poster for grades 10-12. Amy Jones was the scholarship winner.

Fall Herbicide Application A Good Management Practice

TIPTON, Ind. — Applying herbicides now to fields that will be planted to soybeans in the spring can be a beneficial management practice for soybean growers, said experts at Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc.

One early application before cold weather sets in can help eliminate winter annuals — host to soybean cyst nematode (SCN), one of the most devastating of all soybean pests. Fall herbicide application also provides many more benefits at spring planting.

"Winter annuals such as purple deadnettle, henbit, field pennycress, and shepherdspurse provide a place for cyst nematode to reproduce and overwinter," said Danny Greene, Pioneer technical information manager. "Over the last few years, however, research at a number of institutions throughout the United States has shown that eliminating winter annuals with a fall herbicide program is one step that can help the cyst nematode lifecycle."

While managing SCN is, perhaps, the biggest plus of a fall herbicide program, Greene says growers will appreciate the many other benefits as well:

• Enhanced management — A fall application provides excellent burndown and residual control, reducing the need for a burndown in the spring and allowing you to get a head start on planting and spring chores.

• Wider window of opportunity — Fields that are prepared for planting offer a wider window in which to complete planting. This can be especially helpful during a cold, rainy spring that causes unplanned planting delays.

• Cleaner fields — Fields without early weed pressure are drier and warmer. A dry field allows earlier planting, while reducing the potential for soil pathogens such as phytophthora and pythium. A warmer field gives plants a better chance of early germination.

• Broadleaf control — Tough broadleaf weeds such as dandelions, marestail, smartweed, and chickweed are controlled more easily.

• Insect control — Removing winter annuals removes early spring habitat for insects such as white grub, seed corn maggots, and wireworms.

According to Greene, the best time to apply fall chemicals to fields for next season's no-till or conservation-till soybeans is anytime after fall harvest, but prior to soybean emergence in the spring. Application of herbicides with residual activity should be made before the soil freezes. Herbicides without residual activity should be applied before cool temperatures limit their activity.

"Applying fall herbicides offers many benefits and expands management choices." said Greene." We encourage growers to meet with their Pioneer sales professionals to decide if it's the right option for their farms. Our reps can offer management suggestions, discuss programs and put them in touch with the right contacts."

Christmas Tree Issue

containing the plant, placed inside.

The system solves a variety of problems for growers. It moderates container media temperature, providing a more favorable root growth environment during the summer. Plants growing in this system do not blow over during high wind.

The PIP system, noted Bates, is ideal for overwintering plants, eliminating the need for polyhouses or thermal blankets.

PIP technology has been adopted by growers at a phenomenal rate since its inception about a decade ago, and PIP acreage increases yearly.

How does it work?

Bates provided an example of a typical 5- or 6-foot tall tree placed into a 15-gallon container in a PIP system. "A key component of the PIP system is copper-impregnated paint applied to the inside surface of the growing container," he noted.

When the tree roots grow, they typically hit the container wall and begin to circle, a response known as "girdling." In the PIP system, the roots hit the copper, which slightly burns the root tips, causing them to branch and become more fibrous and dense. This improves the growth rate of the plant and enhances establishment after transplanting, according to the specialist.

Bates emphasized that while the PIP technology may not be the answer for all container growers in the state, PIP technology could be used more fully by Pennsylvania growers.

In his newly created position, Bates noted he plans to address production and pest management issues.

And the only way to go about developing an effective extension program for growers is to "talk and visit and interact with you," he told growers at the meeting.

Bates, who was born and raised in Cincinnati, Ohio, also worked in West Virginia and Montana.

Bates' field of expertise is woody ornamental plants. But he has worked in teaching, research, and extension.

Through Bates pointed out he doesn't come from a Christmas tree production background, he has experience working with the nursery industry, which uses many of the same production practices as Christmas tree production.

Bates noted that "effective extension programs for growers should be geared to solving problems and include information growers could take back to their farm. That would include looking at ways to address issues such as best management practices, marketing, and developing improved pest tolerance," he said.

Research and marketing work also needs to involve the national and state Christmas tree grower associations.

One of those areas would be improving marketing. Now, about a third of the public uses artificial trees.

'It's important to continue encouraging consumers to use real Christmas trees," noted Bates. "One key will be to emphasize how Christmas tree production benefits the environment and to rekindle the tradition of using real trees."

Bates comes to Penn State via Montana, where he held a teaching/research position in the Department of Plant Sciences at Montana State University. He also worked as an extension agent in Hamilton County, Ohio and Botetourt County, Virginia.

Bates obtained several degrees, including his bachelor's in 1982 at West Virginia University, a master's in horticulture in 1985 from the same university, and a doctorate in horticulture in 1994 from Virginia Tech.

For growers, Bates indicated the Christmas Tree Management Short Course at Penn State is scheduled Feb. 21-22 at the Penn Stater in State College.

Bates can be reached by e-mail at rmb30@psu.edu or by phone at (814) 863- 2198.

Also, a new agent, Laura McNutt, a Berks County native, has joined Berks extension as a horticultural agent. McNutt, who has ornamental experience and was employed as a technical services and sales representative with E.C. Geiger Inc., grew up in Wernersville.

"I have been helping to milk, and I helped to clean the grates too. Little Emily follows me around and warns me to look out when the cow gets ready to do you know what. In the afternoon I'm scheduled to help with pregnancy checks.

"Sure, I experienced cultural shock on the farm," Parker said. "My job is dealing with people every day in all kinds of different issues. Out here, you are dealing with animals and nature. I'll tell my city friends about all the physical labor involved on the farm. In town, we sit behind desks and go to the gym to get exercise. Out here you are always on the go working.

"But I also see a lot in common between the farm and city," Parker said. "One is the issue of the working mother. Laura and I are both working mothers, but she can have her family right with her at her job. The family is always together, and I think that is very admirable.

"I really didn't know about modern dairy farming-especially about how you milk cows, how you hook up the milkers, and the truck comes to haul the milk away. I really enjoyed finding out how someone else lives, his or her jobs. I had never been exposed to dairy farm life before. Professionally, I can better appreciate land and farming and cows, and the space you need for this. There is reason to live in the city, but there is also need for the farm way of life too. I appreciate this."

The Future Of Dairy Products

In our short-term thinking, we worry about the milk price, whether or not to expand the herd, but how many of us have thought about a future with no dairy products? I did not until I read a very disturbing article in August's Discover magazine titled "Worrying About Milk."

The following is a brief synopsis of the article: A nutritional biochemist from Cornell University who grew up on a dairy farm and consumed dairy products as a youngster, no longer consumes dairy products because of what he discovered over the last three decades doing animal research.

He blames consumption of dairy products for the high incidence of breast cancer and prostate cancer in North America. The theory stated in the article is that cow's milk unnaturally stimulates enzymes and growth hormones in the human body that increase the risk of various diseases.

The article further states that cow's milk might not even build strong bones. The article tended to be one-sided with little reference to research that shows the benefits of dairy products.

These studies conducted to explore the question of dairy products and cancer took place with rats. A series of lab experiments at Cornell and Virginia Tech found that rats given a brief initial exposure to aflatoxin (a known carcinogen) tended to develop liver cancer when fed casein, the main protein in milk.

The theory is that tiny precancerous lesions accumulate throughout the body because of random mutations or exposure to small amounts of carcinogens. These lesions normally remain dormant, but a steady dose of cancer promoters in the diet (in this article-casein) may override natural defenses against the growth of tumors.

However, it was noted in this article that lab rats often do not get cancer from suspected food carcinogens unless they receive enormous doses.

These were numerous research studies cited showing a link between people consuming a high level of dairy foods and the likelihood of them developing a certain kind of cancer. These studies examined thousands of people over several years.

The problem I find with these types of studies is there is no reference to the other factors, or hidden variables, that may contribute to a higher incidence of health problems.

For example, did the people in the studies that consumed higher levels of dairy products tend to be smokers, alcohol drinkers, overweight, consumers of high fat products versus low fat products, heavy consumers of other less nutritious foods (coffee, soda, etc.), less physically active, etc.?

Another aspect of the article compared the incidence of certain disease in other countries versus North America. The article showed a lower incidence of these specific health problems among Asians, who consume very little milk and certain cancers tend to be rare, versus the higher incidence in North America and Europe where intake of dairy foods is greater.

Are there not other aspects of Asian diets, genetics and lifestyles that vary from ours that may explain the difference? Unfortunately, the article was rather weak in acknowledging these arguments.

The most disturbing part of the article was in the last paragraph. It states that people can get all the calcium and protein they need from nondairy and plant sources. As an example, a school system in Miami, Florida has created award winning school lunch programs that do not include meat or dairy foods.

Raising children without exposure to dairy and meat products could possibly result in our future generations not accepting the products that we all work so hard to produce. Animal agriculture is dealing with major issues that are not going to disappear, i.e. environment and nutrition.

This article illustrates that the dairy industry has to be proactive on educating the consumer and marketing the benefits of agriculture and the products produced.

Pennsylvania Grangers Set Policies At State Convention

CARLISLE (Cumberland Co.) — About 325 Pennsylvania State Grange members set new policy on important issues, including prescription and generic drug programs, Food Handler Certification, the importation of dairy cattle from foreign countries, anti-trust and dairy price support programs during the 128th annual convention here.

"As a grass-roots organization, the policies determined here will influence our legislative efforts on Capitol Hill as we work on legislation that will affect agriculture and rural Pennsylvania," Brenda Shambaugh, legislative director, said. "These issues are of greatest concern to our membership, and the Pennsylvania State Grange will see that these policies are addressed at the state and federal level."

Summaries of the key issues approved by the delegates include:

• Prescription drug programs. The Pennsylvania State Grange supports the recently passed Act 68, which deals with HMOs. Important components of the Act, as adopted by the Grange, include the requirement that a HMO must provide the prescriptions deemed "medically necessary" by the doctor and the right of the doctor to order continued hospitalization without retribution by the hospital or provider.

"Provisions have also been put in place for formally addressing medical care and/or coverage concerns for self or a family member in a prompt, expeditious manner," Shambaugh said. "Many rural Pennsylvanians depend on HMOs for their medical coverage, but in recent months, have been dropped by their carrier. We encourage all Pennsylvanians to become familiar with insurance law and programs."

• Food handler certification. With legislation set to take effect July 2001 requiring all nonprofit organizations selling food to the public to have someone certified in proper food handling techniques, the Grange passed a resolution that seeks to exempt nonprofit groups from paying the cost of training volunteers. "Food safety is an issue of paramount importance to our members," Shambaugh said. "But groups like the Grange, which provide many hours of community service to the public, shouldn't have the added financial burden required by the law to require food handling certification. We believe the training program should be provided free to nonprofits so they can continue to provide the type of service they offer to communities across the commonwealth."

• Importation of dairy cattle from foreign countries. The Pennsylvania State Grange is gravely concerned about the importation of cattle from Uruguay and the effect it may have on domestic herds in Pennsylvania.

"It is our concern that all imported livestock, such as the one proposed from Uruguay, may not meet the USDA and Pennsylvania health standards," Shambaugh said. "We believe the Pennsylvania Animal Health Commission and the Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture should be involved so farmers can be assured that these cattle are certified to meet USDA and the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture health regulations before they are imported."

• Anti-trust. Another issue of utmost importance to the membership is anti-trust since farmers have not had the right to bring anti-trust activities against retailers since 1977. Some 23 years later, four meat packers in the U.S. control 81 percent of beef slaughter, 73 percent of sheep, and 57 percent of pork processing, while four major processors control nearly two-thirds of flour milling. Moreover, dairy mergers are occurring like wildfire and dairies and other well-known brands are now owned by foreign-owned firms.

"In the interest of protecting consumer and farmer interests from the concentration of power that has taken place in the food industry," Shambaugh said, "The Pennsylvania State Grange adopted policy requiring the State and National Granges to work for the repeal of the court decision that took the anti-trust option away from farmers."

• Dairy price support program. With farm prices at record lows and milk prices at 20-year lows, the Grange modified its policy concerning the dairy price support program which is set to expire on Dec. 31, 2000, Shambaugh said.

"We modified our policy to reflect that of the National Grange," Shambaugh said. "We now support the National Grange's position that seeks a permanent extension of the dairy price support program."

Farm Bureau Opens Resource Center

GLENMONT, N.Y. — In a celebrated event, New York Farm Bureau opened the Western New York Resource Center Oct. 13 in Batavia.

On hand for the ribboncutting were a host of Farm Bureau leaders, including New York Farm Bureau President John W. Lincoln, American Farm Bureau President Bob Stallman, several state board members, as well as county Farm Bureau presidents from the western New York region.

The county Farm Bureaus of Allegany, Cattaraugus, Chautauqua, Erie, Genesee, Livingston, Monroe, Niagara, Orleans, and Wyoming counties have teamed up to provide a consistent voice to the media and legislators in the western New York area.

The Resource Center offers all the counties involved a unique opportunity to network with each other on critical issues, share information and knowledge on vital agricultural issues, and to make the best use of their resources to support agriculture in New York State.

"This type of coordination is an outstanding example of how we all need to work together both within New York Farm Bureau and beyond," said John W. Lincoln, New York Farm Bureau president. "Agriculture is a changing industry. The Western New York Resource Center represents the innovative and adaptable nature of our membership."

The Western New York Resource Center will provide to members a link to local media, information on agricultural issues, member support, the latest agricultural facts and statistics, legislative updates on agricultural issues, and a toll-free phone number, (877) 383-7663. The office is located at 41 Liberty Street, Batavia, N.Y.

Four New Pest Management Centers

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Agriculture Deputy Secretary Richard Rominger announced recently the creation of regional pest management centers that will help focus research and extension efforts on developing and delivering alternative and safer pest management strategies to farmers and ranchers.

"These centers will help strengthen the connection between production agriculture, research, and extension programs, and agricultural stakeholders throughout the U.S.," said Rominger. "For example, the centers will play a key role in USDA's efforts to work with EPA on the continued implementation of the Food Quality Protection Act."

The centers will bring together university research and extension specialists in each region of the country. In the north central region, Michigan State University, and the University of Illinois will lead a multi-state coalition.

Similar coalitions are established in other areas. Pennsylvania State University and Cornell University are the lead institutions in the Northeast. In the South and West, the University of Florida and the University of California at Davis are the lead institutions.

Rominger emphasized that these cooperative partnerships will involve colleges, universities, and crop production experts from states within the region. The centers will focus their efforts on pest management issues that are common to agricultural production within a region and across state boundaries.

A key objective of the centers is the formation of a responsive pest management network that is able to inform public and private sectors about emerging issues and to identify farmer needs and priorities.

Poultry Ambassador Rijelle Kraft Raises Fancy Fowl, Teaches Embryology

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

YORK (York Co.) — "I've grown up with poultry," said 17-year-old Rijelle Kraft.

She's also spent several years helping with the 4-H embryology program presented throughout York County schools. It seems a natural progression to assume the role of poultry ambassador.

Rijelle will represent Lancaster County and the state as poultry ambassador (formerly called poultry queen).

Rijelle raises fancy fowl such as Cochin and Silkies and capons for 4-H projects. Her dad raises layers, broilers, and fancy fowl.

It was through her mom that Rijelle's poultry interest piqued. As York County's 4-H and youth development assistant agent, Rijelle's mom, Mary Jo, is in charge of the 4-H embryology projects, which are conducted throughout county schools. Rijelle often assists her mom by helping out at the schools.

> "Communication skills are critical today, and the ability to speak in front of others and convey my ideas to them in clear, concise terms is my main goal."
> Rijelle Kraft
> Pennsylvania Poultry Ambassador

The first time, Rijelle "adopted" a chick that didn't seem robust enough to survive.

"I fell in love with that chick, and one thing led to another," Rijelle said.

Her dad, George Kraft Jr., also raises fancy fowl, broilers, and layers in addition to operating a construction business on the family farm.

Although Rijelle has been helping with the schools' embryology projects, her responsibilities as poultry ambassador will expand to promoting the poultry industry as a whole.

"I like public speaking. I've been participating in 4-H public speaking events since I as eight years old," Rijelle said.

"Communication skills are critical today, and the ability to speak in front of others and convey my ideas to them in clear, concise terms is my main goal," Rijelle said.

Having her mother working with the 4-H program has its pluses. Rijelle said, "She continually knows what's going on and what's required."

Her mother is evidently a motivator, because Rijelle's involvement in many different aspects of 4-H is impressive.

She has served as president of the 4-H County Council, teen leader of the social committee, treasurer and teen leader of the poultry club, vice president and teen leader of the swine club, and treasurer of the senior exchange.

She has been a 4-H ambassador, president and teen leader of the rabbit club, social chair of the county council, and member of the meats and the potato judging team.

Awards in 4-H include outstanding speech in county, outstanding role model in the rabbit club, outstanding horticulture member, top teen leader, and numerous other awards.

A senior at York Catholic High School, Rijelle is a peer helper and a member of the National Honor Society, Spanish Honor Society, president of the Spanish club, and editor of the literary magazine, and Student Council.

Next year, Rijelle plans to major in animal science and swine production with a concentration in international agriculture at Virginia Tech.

Poultry Ambassador Rijelle Kraft's favorite fowl is Cochin. Rijelle raises fancy fowl and capons in addition to assisting with 4-H embryology projects. Although a York countian, Rijelle will represent both Lancaster County and the state as poultry ambassador.

> Although Rijelle has been helping with the schools' embryology projects, her responsibilities as poultry ambassador will expand to promoting the poultry industry as a whole.

HOMESTEAD NOTES

'The Bigger The Animal, The Better'

As a town kid, Dave Ace did not seem a likely candidate for a farming career. In fact, as a 9-year-old, he was terrified of the seeing eye dog his group home at Milton Hershey School adopted as a 4-H project. The dog helped him overcome his fear of animals and now Dave says of animals, "The bigger, the better."

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — Dave Ace remembers the day his interest in dairy farming was piqued.

He was on an eighth grade field trip learning about old and new methods of farming. At the Landis Valley Museum, he saw farming as it was in the 1800s.

That was interesting, but when he and his classmates stopped by the dairy center at the Milton Hershey School, where he attends, Ace was amazed to watch cows being milked in th double-six herringbone parlor.

Instructors told the students they could sign up to help milk if they wanted to.

Dave signed up.

"I thought it looked cool," Dave said. "I wasn't sure it would be something I'd want to do long-term, but I wanted to try it."

He tried. And, his life hasn't been the same since.

Dave believes he found his niche. He's learned all about animal husbandry, DHIA record-keeping, pasture rotation, and cow breeds.

He has won awards for showing cows, and the prestigious Clover award from Dauphin County 4-H. It's all rather impressive for a kid who had been scared of a dog when he was 9.

"If it wouldn't have been that our house got a seeing eye pup, I'd probably still be scared of animals," Dave said.

"Now the bigger the animal, the better," Dave said of his attraction to cows.

"I like Brown Swiss best because they're big, good all-round milkers, and I like their color," he said.

Working at the school's dairy center isn't a matter of picking and choosing to do whatever you want. It means eight-hour days during summer vacation and after-school chores. These include lots of parlor scrubbing, weed whacking, mixing feed, and bottle-feeding calves.

"I like it all. There isn't anything I don't like," Dave said.

He finds it fascinating to keep track of calves as they mature and become milk producing. He enjoys pouring over records and seeing how calves progress into mature cows.

He's assisted with research to determine how fast and how much cows eat.

"When it was hot, they didn't eat much during the day. But at night, when it was cooler they ate more," he said of the research.

He was able to raise his own heifers in three different breeds: Guernsey, Polled Herefords, and Brown Swiss to exhibit at the Dauphin County 4-H Fair and the Pennsylvania Farm Show.

Of his first experience with showing, Dave said, "The animals behaved well. It was me that was new," he said of his nervousness and the need to learn to be calm and in control of the animal. He learned to clip and fit the animals to show them to the best advantage, to do top lines, and shave closer at the ears. He also learned how to look at the judge and still be able to control the animal.

"The best way is to work with animals to prepare them for showing is to work with them ahead of time so that they learn to set up themselves," Dave said of proper leg placement. To walk them backward — it's almost like training a dog," Dave said of the need for consistent reinforcement of expectations.

Recently Dave won the distinguished Clover award at the county show. He was a bit apprehensive going into the competition that required him to show not only a cow, but also a horse, sheep, dairy beef, a steer, a goat, and a pig.

It was his first experience with showing a goat, pig, and horse.

"I think I got lucky," Dave said of the smoothness with which everything went.

Dave said that originally he would have been happy to do well with the steer if nothing else.

"It was an exciting day. It was 10:30 at night before we finished."

Looking back over his involvement with dairying, Dave is a bit amazed at how it has changed him.

"It has really taught me that it

(Turn to Page B3)

'The Bigger, The Better'

Just like his attitude toward animals, Ace said the bigger, the better when it comes to tractors and equipment. After several years of participating in a work-study program with a farm equipment company, Ace is adept at repair work.

doesn't hurt to try new things," he said.

Dave said many students complain about the odor when they visit the barns. "Me — I'm so used to it, I say, "What smell?""

Dave also participates in the dairy beef program. Some of the premium money goes into a fund to pay off the initial cost of the animal, some goes into a college fund, and the remainder he spends.

At Messick's Farm Equipment, Dave repairs tractors and equipment through his participation in the auto mechanic program.

"The bigger, the better," Dave said of repairing tractors and harvestors.

Dave has completed an artificial insemination course. Only one other student at the school finished the course.

Not only has Dave excelled in farmwork, but his grades improved scholastically. The school demands grade point averages for students who want to be involved in extracurricular activities such as the dairy center.

For a short period of time near the beginning of his involvement in the dairy center, Dave failed to maintain the grade point average required in general studies. He worked hard to bring up his grades so that he could again work at the dairy center. Since 10th grade, he has been fairly consistent in making the honor roll.

"Dave's grown academically and socially, both in animal and people skills," his supervisor said.

"I have confidence. I wasn't that way initially," Dave said of when he first became a student at Milton Hershey in 1992.

Dave likes dairying so well that he wants to make a career of it. When he graduates from Milton Hershey School in the spring, he will no longer be eligible to work at the center. He also needs to move off campus.

"I'm looking for an ag-related job. I have made a lot of contacts through my work here, so hopefully something will open up," Dave said.

He's also applying to agriculture schools. His first pick is Delaware Valley College. He said, "I'm used to a smaller school, and I have friends who like Del Val."

His ultimate goal is to be a grain nutritionist or milk inspector and have his own farm on the side.

Birds of a feather flock together.

So we've been told.

Some do. Some don't. Not by our observations, anyway.

Bunches of Canada geese have been flocking together lately, noisily honking their way over the farm daily at sunrise and sunset. Numbers of these big birds have escalated locally, after a hatching season during which every little area pond and puddle hosted hatchlings.

The adults and adolescents have now clustered into large, feathered community groupings, perfectly at home hereabouts and with no apparent inclination to winter in milder climates. Where their daily commute takes them, we're not sure. But only rarely do any plunk down on the pond to hang out before heading home to sleep nights at the municipal water supply's Lake Redman reservoir a few miles from here.

Unlike the gregarious geese, other bird regulars appear to be loners, designed by Nature to do their own thing.

One frequents the goldfish pond, standing so still and erect it blends with the rushes and cattails. Fish fanatic that it is, the great blue heron haunts the water's edge, ready to plunge its sword-like bill into the first inattentive fish which meanders by. Occasionally we spot a flash of orange, as this expert fisherman swipes and swallows a good-sized goldfish.

Mid-to-late summer brings the return of a few solitary transients at the pond, green herons which usually arrive toward dusk for their catch-of-the-day dinner entree. Unlike the great blue, these little herons prefer to hide-in-waiting along the multiflora roses and willows lining the pond banks.

Sometimes we hear the guttural call of another fresh-fish fanatic before we spot its handsome blue-gray and white feathered markings. Another pond regular, the kingfisher prefers to eyeball potential dinner candidates from high up, either from the top of the martin house or in the willow tree which hangs over the water. Luckily, the goldfish reproduce abundantly, providing up plentiful supplies of "sushi" for all the fisherbirds.

Lately — and only temporarily we hope — a flock of seven half-grown birds are hanging out in the yard. Those guinea chicks The Farmer brought home weeks ago graduated from dog-crate housing to a temporary-fenced-mini-yard to daylight freedom.

They declared their independence a little earlier than we planned, after sneaking out a corner of the fence not well closed after I fed them one morning. A brief hunt found them sunning themselves in a secluded corner of the yard under an overgrown, overhang of forsythia hedge. I scoffed, but The Farmer predicted their retreat to the fenced area come evening. Sure enough, as the sun was sinking behind the barn, all seven were scratching around the feed bits inside the fence left flung open.

Except when I headed to secure the fence against potential overnight visitors — foxes, hawks, and owls — they had vanished. While they were taking little flights, none of them had polished their airborne skills enough to escape veteran predators.

Running against a deadline to shower and head for an evening meeting, I went guinea stalking once more. This time I found them on the other side of the brushy forsythia, preparing to roost up on the yard fence. Some were already perched there. Other were making fluttering attempts. One was plain-down missing.

A guinea call sounds like a screeching wagon wheel — over and over. While the missing one was unseen, it was not unheard. During the next 10 minutes I spent trying to corral the noisy runaway, two very interested, very talented bird-catching cats turned up to "help." Which only added to the distressed guinea's screeching. When the other six flew from the fence and fled into their pen from the commotion, I slammed the cage door shut.

Finally, the distressed guinea remembered it could fly, dive-bombed into a weed patch at the chain link fence, where I snagged it. The irate bird — the largest one of the flock and probably a rooster — continued to scream while I delivered it to safekeeping with its buddies.

So much for gratitude.

I hope these birds of a feather soon get their act together.

Chestnut Dressing

My mother makes the best dressing (some call it stuffing or filling) for the holiday bird. After 50 plus years, she has the recipe perfected. On occasion she altered the recipe; adding alien ingredients such as cornbread or dried fruit, with great protest from the rest of us. One year she decided to add roasted chestnuts, with great results.

Chestnuts found in stores are generally European in origin. They are similar to the native American Chestnut, but are resistant to the blight that killed that American trees. They should not be confused with the horse chestnut, which is closely related to the buckeye and not recommended for eating.

Harvested in the fall, the reddish brown nuts have a cream-colored kernel covered with a thin brown skin. Choose chestnuts that are plump, heavy and firm, with glossy shells. Soft, light, nuts with dull or wrinkled shells are too old. After picking, they are generally seasoned for several days to remove excess moisture by spreading the nuts 1-2 layers deep on trays made of half-inch hardware cloth. When cured, store in a cool dry place that is inaccessible to rodents and insects.

Cook chestnuts using one of the following methods:

Roasting: With the tip of a sharp knife cut an X in the flat side of each nut. Roasting over an open fire requires a covered utensil with a long handle. Nuts will build up steam and explode even after removing from the heat. In the oven, roast the cross cut nuts for 15-20 minutes at 425 F.

Boiling: Cut the nuts in half with a sharp knife. In a shallow pan, cover with only enough water so nuts are not completely covered. Bring to a boil, reduce heat and simmer for 15 minutes. Drain and allow to cool slightly. The kernels should come out easily. The longer they are cooked, the mealier they will become. We like to dip the cooked nuts in melted butter with salt added.

Microwave: This method requires a bit more experimentation, but can yield excellent results. Cut the nuts in half and place cut end down on a double layer of paper toweling. Start with eight medium size nuts and cook for 1-2 minutes.

Cooked chestnuts may be kept in the refrigerator in jars for several days, or in the freezer. Fresh and cooked chestnuts can be frozen, either peeled or in their shells.

No matter which preparation method you use, you must remove the outer hard shell and the thin inner brown skin. It is easier to peel chestnuts that have been cooked and are still hot.

Chestnuts are a good source of potassium and a source of vitamin C, copper, magnesium, and some B vitamins. Eaten raw or undercooked they can cause bloating and gas.

These tasty nuts can be added to soups, salads, and stuffings. They can also be ground into flour that is added to cakes or made into flat cakes, pancakes, waffles, or bread. Chestnut puree is used to flavor ices, puddings, and pastry creams. Mont Blanc, a famous dessert, consists of a meringue base that is covered with a mound of chestnut puree topped with Chantilly cream.

A handful of whole chestnuts makes a tasty addition to braised cabbage. In Europe chestnuts are traditionally served with game or poultry, especially during the holiday season. One pound of chestnuts yields a little more than 8 ounces (2 cups) of peeled nuts.

Ruth's Chestnut Dressing

½ pound chestnuts
4 tablespoons melted butter
½ cup chopped celery
¼ cup onion, minced
½ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons poultry seasoning
1 beaten egg
2 cups soft bread crumbs

Prepare, peel, and chop chestnuts. Melt butter in large pan, saute chestnuts, celery, and onion. Add salt, poultry seasoning, egg and bread crumbs. Toss well.

Yields enough stuffing to accompany a 7-8 pound bird. Bake covered in a casserole dish at 350 F until it reaches an internal temperature of 165F.

Why Do Leaves Change Color

Summer's green leaves have been replaced by bright autumn colors like red, orange, gold, and brown. These color changes are caused by three things: leaf pigment, length of night, and the weather

There are three types of pigments. The first, chlorophyll, gives leaves their green color. Chlorophyll is needed for photosynthesis-the process that helps plants use sunlight to make sugar for food.

Carotenoids, a second type of pigment, produce the yellow, orange, and brown colors in things like corn, carrots, and daffodils.

Anthocyanins give color to cranberries, red apples, blueberries, strawberries and more. Both chlorophyll and carotenoids are present in the leaf cells throughout the growing season. Anthocyanins are made in the autumn because of bright light and excess plant sugars in the leaf cells.

Leaves are also affected by the increasing length of night. As darkness times lengthen, biochemical processes begin to change the leaves. The weather is the third factor-especially temperature and moisture.

The brightest color displays are usually in years with a succession of sunny days and cool, crisp nights.

Book Captures The Essence Of Lancaster County Farmland Preservation

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Lancaster County has long been known for its strong agricultural heritage and close-knit communities of Amish and other plain sects.

While this area remains one of the most productive in the world, tremendous development pressure threatens the farming industry and way of life. Yearly, Lancaster County loses 1,000 acres of farmland to development. Since 1988, Lancaster Farmland Trust, a private, nonprofit organization, has worked to encourage a thriving agricultural economy by preserving Lancaster County's rich and productive farmland.

To raise a greater awareness of their effort, the Trust has written and published "Lancaster County Farm Life: Farming Families and Their Commitment to the Land." Through its compelling black and white photography and words, this 120-page book depicts the lives and work of seven families who have permanently preserved their farms. It captures the essence of what farming means to Lancaster County, to its people, and to the rest of the world. Filled with stories of the land, histories of generations, and hopes and concerns for the future, "Lancaster County Farm Life" puts names and faces on the work of the Trust.

"Lancaster County Farm Life" was written by Sara Barton, photographed by Gini Wagner, and designed by DLD Advertising. All those who have worked on the project are dedicated to preserving the land and heritage that makes Lancaster so special. The book is available for purchase through Lancaster Farmland Trust, 128 East Marion Street, Lancaster, PA 17602. The purchase price is $39.95 plus six percent PA sales tax and $4 for shipping and handling. Quantity discounts are available. For more information or to place an order, call the Trust at (717) 293-0707, e-mail lft@savelancasterfarms.org, or visit www.savelancasterfarms.org.

Explore The Lure Of Chocolate

MARIANNE RHODES
University of Delaware

NEWARK, Del. — All 20 student chocolate-tasters agree: Dutch-process cocoa is not a chocoholic's dream. One dab of the dark brown powder on their tongues sends them dashing for palate-cleansing water and saltine crackers.

They grimace in surprise. How could chocolate taste like this?

Dr. Sherry Kitto, professor in the department of plant and soil sciences at the University of Delaware, isn't surprised. The alkali-processed cocoa is bitter and unsweetened, she says, not at all like the Hershey®Kiss™ or the other piece of chocolate candy the students have just tasted. "They're finding out there's a whole other world of chocolate from what they are used to," she says with a laugh. Her plant science honors colloquium on chocolate, she asserts, will widen their horizons.

Who wouldn't want to take an honors colloquium that requires you to eat chocolate? Not Jed Dooley, a freshman majoring in economics. "It rocks!" he says. "The taste tests are why I signed up."

Electrical engineering major Phil Wilcox has a different take. "Everyone likes eating chocolate," he says. "What I like about this class is how we look at chocolate from so many different angles."

Different angles studies include the origin and horticulture of cacao, the chemistry of chocolate and its nutritional value (good news: it has nutritional value!), how chocolate is produced, its social and financial implications, and its use in cuisine.

"We're exploring all the things about chocolate that makes it so desirable, irresistible, universally appealing and yummy," Kitto says.

But it's not all cocoa and Kisses, she continues. In addition to taste-testing, these honors students, all first-semester, first-year students, must complete three papers and a group project and read four related books, fiction and non-fiction.

Students will compile individual reports on the taste-testing, or "sensory evaluation" results, discussed in groups of five and recorded after each test session. The tests are conducted scientifically, comparing the Hershey's Kiss with a different milk chocolate each week.

"Students rate each specimen with descriptions such as "burnt,' "fruity/salty,' or "toasted' to describe aroma; and "bitter,' "salty,' "sour' or "sweet' to describe taste," says Kitto. "They examine appearance, texture and chemical feeling factors as well."

The course draws students from all majors, Kitto explains. "Engineers can explore the mechanics of making and packaging chocolate," she says. "Business majors discover how the big candy companies market different kinds of chocolate to various target audiences. Veterinary students can research why chocolate is toxic to some animals."

QUESTION — Rachel Musser is searching for a spaghetti sauce recipe that tastes similar to Prego pasta sauce (traditional).

ANSWER — Fay Strickler wanted a recipe for Ezekial bread. Thanks to Grace Shetter, Alburtis, for sending the recipe from Reginald Cherry Ministries, Texas. She writes that the recipe is based on the Old Testament text: Take thou also until the wheat, and barley, and beans, and lentils, and millet, and spelt, and put them in one vessel and make thee bread thereof. Ezekiel 4:9.

Ezekiel Bread

2½ cups whole wheat
1½ cups whole rye
½ cup barley
¼ cup millet
¼ cup lentils
2 tablespoons great Northern beans (uncooked)
2 tablespoons red kidney beans (uncooked)
2 tablespoons pinto beans (uncooked)

Measure and combine all ingredients into a large bowl to make 8 cups flour. Only use 4 cups per batch of bread.

Pour the ingredients into a flour mill and grind. The flour should be the consistency of regular flour. Coarse flour may cause digestion problems. Measure 4 cups flour. Store remaining 4 cups in freezer for future use.

Measure 1 cup lukewarm water in a small mixing bowl. Add to the water, stirring to dissolve:

1 teaspoon honey
1 tablespoon Red Star yeast OR 2 tablespoons of another brand

Set aside and let yeast grow 5-10 minutes. In large mixing bowl, combine the following:

flour
¼ cup extra virgin olive oil
½ cup honey
1 cup warm water

Add yeast to above mixture. Stir until well mixed. Mixture should be the consistenly of heavy cornbread. Spread batter evenly in a 11x15x1-inch pan sprayed with no cholesterol cooking oil. Let mixture rise in a warm place for one hour. Bake at 375 degrees about 30 minutes. Check for doneness. Bread should not be doughy, but somewhat like baked corn bread.

ANSWER — S. Duggan, Swanton, Md., requested the recipe for chocolate banana drink published previously in this paper. Thanks to Maxine Klingler, Selinsgrove, for sending a copy.

Chocolate Banana Blast

2 cups fat-free milk
1 large, peeled, sliced banana, frozen
¼ cup chocolate flavored syrup
1 teaspoon vanilla extract

Combine all ingredients in a blender until smooth. Yields three 8-ounce servings.

ANSWER — A Newburg reader wanted recipes for jams and jellies or fruit spreads without sugar or artificial sweetener. She'd like recipes that taste similar to brands such as Polaner's All Fruit, Spreadable Fruit, or Smucker's Simply 100% Fruit. Thanks to Virginia Zimmerman who recommends buying LM pectin at a health food store. The pectin comes with directions for making the spreads. And questions, call Virginia at (717) 738-0093.

ANSWER — Gerald Myers, Wellsville, wanted a recipe for preserving eggs. Thanks to Audrey Minns for writing that eggs can be preserved by breaking, scrambling, and adding one teaspoon honey or salt to each cup. Mix well. Measure and freeze the mixture into small containers coated vegetable spray for easy removal. Three tablespoons mixture equals one egg. Measure amounts that fit your personal needs.

When frozen, pop out of container and place several together in a freezer bag and immediately return to freezer. When needed, remove as many from the freezer bag as needed. Let thaw in refrigerator only. For best results, use thawed eggs the same day. Do not leave thawed eggs in the refrigerator for long periods of time before using.

ANSWER — Here are some more recipes for cookie mixes in the jar sent in by Rachel Glick, New Holland, and Audrey Minns. These recipes are often requested holiday gift giving. Clip out and save for your gift giving list.

Sand Art Brownies

1 cup plus 2 tablespoons flour
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon baking powder
⅓ cup baking cocoa
⅔ cup granulated sugar
½ cup M&Ms or chocolate pieces
½ cup walnut pieces

Fill wide-mouth quart jar in the order given above. Close lid tightly. When ready to make, empty contents of jar into a bowl. Add:

3 whole eggs, lightly beaten
1 teaspoon vanilla
⅔ cup cooking oil

Mix well and pour into greased pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 32-37 minutes in a 7x11-inch pan or for 27-32 minutes in 9x9-inch pan. Cool and cut into 2-inch squares. Store in airtight container.

Sand Castle Brownies

⅓ cup chopped nuts
½ cup semi-sweet chocolate chips
⅓ cup flaked coconut
⅔ cup packed brown sugar
¾ cup granulated sugar
⅓ cup baking cocoa
1½ cups flour

In a one-quart container, layer ingredients in order given, packing well between each layer. Cover and store in a cool, dry place for up to six months.

To bake, place contents of container in mixing bowl and mix well. Add the following:

2 eggs, beaten
⅔ cup vegetable oil
1 teaspoon vanilla

Mix well. Spread into greased 8-inch square baking pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes. Cool on wire rack.

Note: This makes a nice gift. Give container with instructions for final ingredients attached.

White Chocolate Macadamia Nut Cookies

1¼ cups sugar
½ cup chopped macadamia nuts
3 (1.4 ounce) white crunch candy bars, coarsely chopped (press this layer firmly)
2 cups flour mixed with ½ teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon salt

Layer ingredients in order given in a 1-quart wide-mouth canning jar. Press each layer firmly in place before adding next ingredient.

Baking instructions: Empty cookie mix into large mixing bowl. Use your hands to thoroughly blend mix. Add:

½ cup butter, softened
1 egg, slightly beaten
1 teaspoon vanilla

Mix until completely blended. Dough becomes stiff; you will need to finish mixing with your hands to make a smooth dough.

Shape into walnut-sized balls. Place 2-inches apart on sprayed baking sheets.

Bake at 375 degrees for 12-14 minutes until tops are very lightly browned. Cool 5 minutes on baking sheet. Remove cookies to racks to finish cooling. Makes 2½ dozen cookies.

White Potatoes Or Sweet?

Both white potatoes and sweet potatoes can be great components of a healthful diet. They each have strong points.

The best feature of white potatoes is probably their potassium content: 660 milligrams in a medium potato. (A "medium" potato is described as 2.25 to 3 inches long, weighing about 4.25 ounces).

A medium white potato contains less than 100 calories, 2.5 grams of protein, and just one-tenth of a gram of fat. It also contains about 25 milligrams of vitamin C — more than 25 percent of what you should consume in day.

As a rule, sweet potatoes contain less potassium — about 265 milligrams in a 5-inch-long tuber that weighs about 4.5 ounces. It's got a few more calories at about 135, and just over 2 grams of protein and less than a half-gram of fat. Sweet potatoes contain almost 30 milligrams of vitamin C. But their claim to fame is their vitamin A content: one sweet potato has a whopping 26,000 IUs (International Units) of vitamin A. That's about 26 times the daily recommendation. Unfortunately, white potatoes don't have any vitamin A.

Of course, you can't just judge the potato without also judging the potato toppings. If you're the type who won't look at a sweet potato unless it's got butter, brown sugar and marshmallows all over it, you'll have to make sure you consider the extra fat, sugar and calories. Likewise, if your white potato must have some margarine and sour cream, take that into account when comparing white and sweet potatoes.

Here are some facts to keep in mind:

— A tablespoon of butter has about 100 calories and 11 grams of fat (7 grams saturated).

— A tablespoon of margarine has about 100 calories and 11 grams of fat (saturated fat content varies).

— A tablespoon of brown sugar has about 50 calories.

— A tablespoon of sour cream has 30 calories and 3 grams of fat (1.8 grams saturated).

One way to avoid toppings and the calories they represent is to cut white and sweet potatoes into wedges, spray with an oil spritzer or cooking spray, lightly coat with seasoning, and roast them in a hot oven.

Dangerous Chemicals In My House?

If cleaning products in our homes-things like window cleaners, tub and tile cleaners, furniture polish, paint thinners, and even ammonia aren't stored properly they could make us sick.

Strong chemicals change the air quality or pollute the water we drink! The federal government requires that chemical companies put warnings on the labels of these chemicals-and it's a good thing. Highly toxic or poisonous chemicals have a POISON label. Extremely flammable (meaning it could catch fire), corrosive or toxic chemicals have a DANGER label. And moderately or slightly-toxic chemicals have a WARNING/CAUTION label.

When buying cleaning products, be sure to read the label for a list of ingredients.

How do turkeys grow so big?

Consumers-people who buy products-demand lots of meat on their turkeys, especially around Thanksgiving time. Turkey breeders-people who grow turkeys-have to find ways to grow bigger, meatier birds.

They do this with the help of scientists like Karl Nestor. He has been studying turkeys at Ohio State University for more than 35 years! To grow bigger birds Nestor breeds certain sire (male turkey) lines for growth traits and dam (female turkey) lines for reproduction characteristics. It takes three generations of turkeys before a change-like more meat-can be seen. Because producers are growing bigger turkeys, leg strength is very important. Without strong bones and muscles, the turkeys can't support all that extra meat. So scientists also breed turkeys that will grow bigger, stronger legs capable of carrying faster-growing, heavier bodies.

One important factor in growing turkeys is disease. As turkeys grow larger, their ability to fight disease decreases. Thanks to the help of scientists, this problem can be solved by breeding lines of turkeys that produce more meat and grow up healthy.

Cedar Crest Participants At The All-American Dairy Show

The Cedar Crest FFA recently participated at the Pennsylvania All-American Dairy Show.

Members worked as tour guide for elementary students in the Harrisburg area. Members who served as tour guides were Chet Brubaker, Joel Krall, Jeremy Balsbaugh, B.J. Atkins, Beth Kreider, Kris Keller, Samantha Shepler, Sara Tribioli, and Travis Krall.

They told the students about different breeds of cattle, such as Holsteins, Jerseys, Brown Swiss, and Ayrshires. The tour guides informed the children about the different feeds fed to cows, such as hay, ryelage, corn silage, haylage, and soybeans. They also showed preschoolers how a cow is milked. At the end of the tour, the children realized that the milk they drink was not made at the store, but that it came from a cow.

In addition to members serving as tour guides, Daniel Eberly, Hannah Bomgardner, Sarah Krall, and Jared Zimmerman participated in the dairy judging team competition.

They competed against 25 teams from across Pennsylvania and ended up placing first. They will receive money and ribbons for their efforts.

York County Selects FFA Outstanding Members

Senior students from each of the York County schools with FFA chapters are eligible to be selected as the outstanding members of their local chapters.

Each person selected will receive monetary awards sponsored by the York County FFA. A committee consisting of Pat Deibert of the Lincoln Intermediate Unit, Ed Heindel of the York office of Farm Credit Services, and John Smith representing the York Fair selected the first- and second-place students from each chapter.

From those individuals placing first in their chapter, an overall county award winner was selected. The county award recipient is Susan Richardson of Kennard Dale FFA chapter. Richardson is the daughter of Charles and Ruth Richardson, Fawn Grove. As a part of her FFA experiences, she has had projects in sheep finishing, swine finishing, dairy heifer, and dairy herd.

Richardson is serving for the second year as her chapter president and served as the treasurer of her local FFA chapter during her sophomore year. She was chosen for the York County FFA office of secretary last year and president for the current year. She has participated in and received numerous awards in York County contests such as dairy judging, creed and public speaking, agronomy, horse judging, parliamentary procedure, and recordkeeping. She has also participated in state contests of parliamentary procedure and dairy showmanship.

Richardson has also been in the marching, pep, and concert bands in school as well as being involved in other community organizations.

First-place winners of other chapters were Greg Daugherty, son of Dennis and Betty Daugherty, Dover, Dover Chapter; Gabbriel Frigm, daughter of Terry Frigm and Bonnie Euler, of the Gifford Pinchot Chapter at Northern York; Jennifer Eichelberger, daughter of Robert and Martha Eichelberger, Airville, of the Red Lion Area Chapter; and Jen Landis, daughter of Clyde and Barbara Landis, York New Salem of the White Rose Chapter at York Vo-Tech.

Lindsay Jones, daughter of Richard and Carol Jones, of the East Berlin of the Dover Chapter; Jeromy Marsteller, son of John and Christine Marsteller, Stewartstown, of the Kennard Dale chapter; and Holly Rankin, daughter of Sharon Rankin, Red Lion, of the Red Lion Area FFA Chapter, received second-place honors for representing their chapters.

These outstanding students will be completing applications this fall in order to receive the Keystone Degree, awarded by the Pennsylvania FFA Association.

York County FFA Names Scholarship Winners

Heather Bankert, the daughter of Wayne and Sue Bankert, Red Lion, has been selected to receive the Carroll F. Thompson Scholarship. The recipient was selected by the York County Vocational Agricultural Teachers Association to receive the scholarship, given in memory of Carroll F. Thompson, who was formerly a vocational agriculture teacher at Spring Grove and Dover high schools.

Bankert is a 2000 graduate of Red Lion Area High School and has completed four years of agricultural education. During her high school years, she participated in activities such as livestock judging, creed speaking, meats judging, dairy foods, apple judging, parliamentary procedure, recordkeeping, agricultural salesmanship, and leadership training conferences.

Bankert served as her local FFA chapter treasurer for two years and as vice president her senior year. She also served as the York County FFA secretary during her junior year and as president during her senior year.

As part of her FFA experiences, she has had projects of off-farm work experience, poultry capons, sheep breeding, and sheep finishing.

Bankert was also involved in sports and was a tutor for a life skills class in school as well as doing volunteer work in community organizations.

She is enrolled as a student at Millersville University with plans of becoming a special education teacher.

Angela Miller, daughter of Robert Miller and Mary Luckenbaugh, was selected to receive the York County FFA scholarship. Miller is a 1999 graduate of the Dover Area High School, where she was enrolled in the agricultural education program. She is studying English at Shippensburg University with plans of becoming a secondary education English teacher.

Other students who are also receiving scholarships from funds administered by the York County Agriculture Teachers are Michael Burrell, son of William and Carolyn Burrell, Dover; Heather Crowl, daughter of Ellis and Joyce Crowl, Airville; and Jason Deardorff, son of Wayne and Bonnie Deardorff, East Berlin.

The scholarship recipients must be graduates of an agricultural education/horticulture program in York County who are continuing their education in a post-high school institution with selection based on their future plans, financial need, leadership activities, and scholastic performance.

Tomb Of A King

In November 1922, two British archaeologists found what was to become a very famous tomb Howard Carter and Lord Carnarvon found the tomb of Tutankhamun also known as King Tut

King Tut who lived during the 1300s B C , was only about 9 when he became pharaoh or ruler, of Egypt However he didn't remain in power long because he died when he was 18 or 19 People who have studied the time and Tut s life believe he was murdered

Even though he was so young Tut is the most famous of all Egyptian rulers and that s probably because of his tomb Tut s tomb included the antechamber burial chamber and the treasury

The antechamber was the room outside the burial chamber where Tut s mummy was found Chariots food couches and thrones were all found in the antechamber along with two figures that guarded the door of the burial chamber

The coffin which is about 6 feet long and 2 feet wide was made of solid gold Tut s burial mask which he was wearing was gold and it had beautiful stones and colored glass in its design

The treasury room was next to the burial chamber It contained treasures for what the Egyptians believed would be Tut s life after his death Along with boats the treasury included gold figures of goddesses

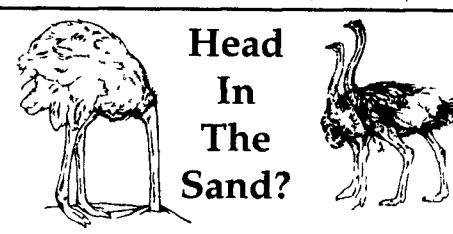
Head In The Sand?



Found only in certain parts of Africa, ostriches are the largest birds in the world They can grow to be 8 to 10 feet tall, and some of them weigh up to 400 pounds

The small, flat heads and long necks of the ostriches are covered with down, or very fine, small feathers, while their bodies are covered with soft feathers Female and young male ostriches are grayish brown The body feathers of the grown males are glossy black, and the wings and tail feathers are white

Even though they can't fly, ostriches can move very fast Their powerful legs help them hit speeds of about 40 miles an hour And their legs are so strong, they are able to kill with one kick

Ostriches live in the desert, where they get water from plants they eat Even though many pictures show them with their heads in the sand, ostriches don't really do that

Male ostriches mate with several females, and all the females lay their eggs in one nest they make by scooping an area out of the ground The nests usually have 30 to 50 of the largest eggs in the world, which are 6 to 9 inches long and weigh from 3 to 5 pounds

Meal Time In Child Care

TOWANDA (Bradford Co.) — "Eating Times — The Ups and Downs" is the title of the workshop being presented by Penn State Cooperative Extension. Child care providers and interested parents can participate in the workshop from 7-9 p.m. on Thursday, Oct. 26, at the Bradford County Extension Office, 701 South Fourth Street, Towanda.

The workshop will provide child care providers and parents with help in making meal times happy and enjoyable times, especially for young children.

Tips on keeping food safe and ideas for lunches will be suggested.

Workshop participants will also have the opportunity to visit, by way of satellite television, several child care facilities and see the ideas for handling meal time in "living color." Providers will hear other providers talk about how they handle meal time and problems that arise.

The "Eating Times — The Ups and Downs" workshop is part of a statewide Better Kid Care child care provider training program presented by Penn State Cooperative Extension and partially funded by the Pennsylvania Department of Public Welfare, and the Pennsylvania Child Care/ Early Childhood Development Training System.

Child care providers can receive two DPW training credits for participating in the workshop. Continuing Education Credits (CEUs) are also available.

To register to attend or for more information on the program, support materials and other services from "Better Kid Care," call Cathy Guffey at (570) 265-2896. Visit the Better Kid Care Website at www.betterkidcare.psu.edu.

Freight, Farming, And A Family Business

MICHELLE RANCK
Lancaster Farming Staff

OLEY (Berks Co) — A willingness to learn, change, and evolve combined with top-notch employees has proven to be the key to success and business growth for the Gotwals family.

From a hog-hauling operation to a cement hauling business, the Gotwals' transportation business now hosts the second-largest ground horse transportation company in the nation, a freight division, a fleet maintenance facility, and a 525-acre dairy farm.

Brothers William and Robert Gotwals bought their first truck in 1955 to begin their hog-hauling operation from Indiana to Philadelphia. Next the business evolved into hauling bulk cement until totals reached 30 trucks to transport hogs and 90 trucks to haul cement.

Today Brook Ledge Inc. transports horses while Xpressway hauls freight such as Snapple products, canned mushrooms, cocoa beans, glass bottles, and rolls of paper.

The Gotwals moved to the greener pastures of the racetrack when they bought the horse-hauling business from George Hutt and his two sons from Norristown in 1974.

> "Every successful business is built on good people . . . We have the best there is."
> Brad Gotwals

Both companies used the same freightliner dealer and many employees,including drivers, dispatchers, and a sales representative, plus Hutt's son, George Jr., worked for the Gotwals for five years after the acquisition, which eased the transition into the business.

"They taught us the business. Without them we wouldn't have bought it, it's that simple. It's that specialized. You can know horses and you can know trucking but still fall flat on your face," said Brad.

The Gotwals actually conducted business out of Norristown until provisions could be made at the farm in Oley.

"I didn't know about horses previously," he said. "We still learn more every day."

Family participation has grown to include Bob's son Brent and Bill's son Brad, Bill's daughter Joan, and Brad's son William, 19.

Bill takes care of the fields and dairy besides taking his turn as a driver; Brad drives trucks and takes care of administrative responsibilities; Joan, Leola, is an office manager for the company; and William, 19, works as a shop mechanic, drives trucks, and helps out at the dairy.

Brook Ledge hauls mostly Thoroughbred horses bred for the racetrack, but they also move Standardbreds, show horses, and pleasure horses.

According to Brent, taking careful precautions minimizes risk and helps give drivers peace of mind about the responsibility of hauling $30,000 to $5 million horses on the trips. To ensure the safety of their high-priced charges during the long rides, drivers check the screen of the closed-circuit TV in the cab.

"The first half hour is the most critical, until they (the horses) settle down," said Brad. "They're usually nervous unless they're seasoned travelers." Although colts and fillies are separated, the horses seem to be concerned about who is in the next stall, and the "pecking order," said Brad.

The trucks are also kept in top shape to ensure safety, as Brook Ledge mechanics check 30-40 different items on the truck after each trip.

The horses have hay available to them at all times, along with a constantly supply of water. Chains equipped with panic-release snaps on either side of the stall help keep the horses controlled. Each stall is bedded with straw; a whole bale of straw pads the floor of the box stall for added safety and comfort.

Every five hours the water buckets are filled. Although water consumption varies for each animal, Brad has had horses drink five buckets, or 25 gallons of water, on the trip from New York to Miami.

More and more horses have been shipped in box stalls, says Brad. "The horses arrive in better condition. They're less stressed. The stall feels like the familiar surroundings of home."

An array of windows keeps the temperatures inside the trailer low. "The worst thing they can do is sweat," said Brad, who noted that a sweated horse will quickly catch a cold.

Drivers feel the ears of the horses to check for proper body temperature during transit.

The inside of the truck can be changed from three single stalls to two double stalls to one box stall to fit customer's preferences and pocketbooks. Brad estimates that it takes 10-15 minutes to load 8-10 horses. The lure of air travel has become more and more attractive to owners who take advantage of shorter travel time to ship their horses.

"There's not a day goes by that we're not picking up or making at delivery at the airport," said Brad, who has been on the road 30 days this year.

Crunch time for Brook Ledge trucking comes during spring and fall, when the horses need to be moved between Northern and Southern racetracks for the changing season.

From the beginning of November through mid-December, "Everybody wants to go to Florida to train," said Brad. Horses must be off the grounds at Saratoga while the Southern tracks are open for winter business.

Fall sales also contribute to a busy autumn season, as horses must be transported to their new quarters for the winter.

The drivers, who take five hour shifts, take extra care in braking slowly and smoothly and making gradual turns. Brook Ledge utilizes not only their full-time truck drivers to transport the horses, but also freight drivers, mechanics, part-time help, and local farmers who hold CDL licenses and have been trained by Brook Ledge.

Brook Ledge drivers are trained by accompanying an experienced driver to learn the routine and the directions to the farms for at least six months before they go out on their own. "It's critical to get things right," said Brad.

Between transporting horses to and from the racetrack or airport or to veterinarians for surgery, Brook Ledge trucks cover approximately four million miles of blacktop a year, hauling thousands of horses. Thirty 52-foot tractor trailers plus 30 straight trucks complete the horse-hauling fleet.

The family also owns two 20-acre farms, one in Ocala Fla., and another in Lexington, Ky., as a mini-terminal used for transferring horses. Small trucks are sent to gather horses to the "hub" farm, where tractor trailers pick up a full load.

Out of 30 tractor-trailers, 15 are over the road at one time, making multi-day trips while the others are making local trips. Each driver uses the same truck on each trip.

"We're about as big as we want to get," said Brad. "Anything more than this is going to get impersonal. Getting bigger means we lose control over what happens. Now we know about each employee, who their family is, what their hobbies are. If we get bigger, we lose track of who they are."

Washington DC, Saratoga, Chicago, Detroit are just a few of the Northeastern cities to which Brook Ledge transports horses for the summer season.

"There's a racetrack in most major cities," said Brad. Kentucky hosts approximately five major racetracks, while Ohio, a hotbed for Standardbred sulky races, has eight major tracks. Races and shows on the weekend make for busy weekends for the hauling company.

Approximately 1,800 farms, and the directions to each farm, are on computerized records in the office, a renovated tenant house on the farm. Besides the main offices, the farm hosts the dairy farm and six bay shop facilities for the various companies run by the Gotwals.

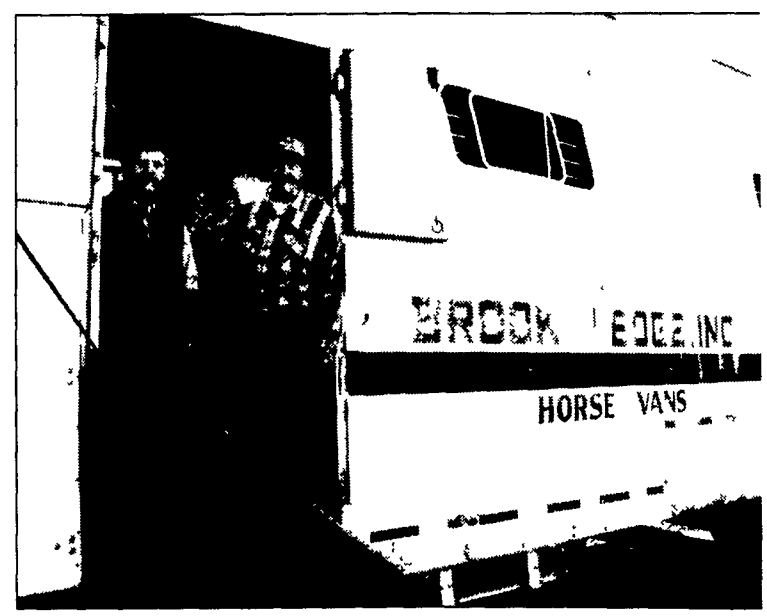
When the orders come in, dispatchers write pertinent information on cards that are placed on bulletin boards until a load can be grouped together.

"We're basically a travel agency for horses," said Brad.

One load can have $7 million of horses on board. Owners of these horses, said Brad, are mostly business owners, but celebrities such as country singer Reba McIntyre, fashion designer Calvin Klein, Boston Celtics coach Rick Pitino, Buddy Ryan and former chicken farmer and owner of the New York Yankees George Steinbrenner also get in

(Turn to Page B15)

Two brothers, Bob and Bill Gotwals, started the company with the purchase of their first truck in 1955. The Gotwals family now runs the full-fledged freight and horse hauling business from a 525-acre dairy farm. From left is co-founder Bill Gotwals, his daughter Joan, son Brad, and Brad's son William.



Besides taking care of administrative responsibilities, Bill, a co-founder of the company, and his son Brad Gotwals spend time behind the wheel of the horse-hauling tractor trailers. Although most racetracks have a loading ramp made of earth, each truck is equipped with a long loading ramp such as the ramp in the picture.

Brad Gotwals, left, and dispatcher Bob Donolly are gearing up for a busy fall of transporting horses from Northern to Southern racetracks. When a call comes in, dispatchers write pertinent information on cards that are placed on bulletin boards until a load can be grouped together.

Utility Bills Getting You Down? Plant Stuff On The Roof

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Gardeners are always looking for new planting sites, but a research team in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences is aiming higher by developing a system that would replace the tar-and-gravel materials used on flat roofs with a surface covered by living plants — a green roof.

"Europeans have been cultivating vegetation on rooftops for decades," says David Beattie, associate professor of ornamental horticulture. "The roofs of large buildings — flat roofs in particular — are subjected to large swings in temperatures that cause cracking and eventually leakage into the floors below."

Beattie and Robert Berghage, associate professor of ornamental horticulture, are working with JSP International Inc., a Malvern manufacturer of plastics used in automotive bumpers, to create a plastic-based roofing system that can be used as a planting site for vegetation.

The company uses PEPP, porous expanded polypropylene, which is a compressed plastic mat that can be used as a growth matrix or surface insulator for the vegetation layer.

For the past six months, Beattie and Berghage have tested prototypes planted with sedum, a drought-tolerant succulent plant variety that is related to cactus, and hard fescue, a grass. "We think sedum will be effective because some varieties stay short, don't shed a lot of dead plant material as winter sets in, and are easy to propagate," Berghage says. "The temperatures and winds on top of a building can be brutal, so the best plant material to use should be low-lying and need minimal maintenance."

In a series of tests this summer, the researchers measured temperatures on a gravel roof, on a plastic-sheet roof and on a planted roof prototype. The temperatures on a sunny day with ambient temperatures around 88 degrees Fahrenheit measured 140 degrees F on the plastic sheeting, 118 degrees F on the gravel roof, and 82 degrees F on the planted roof prototype.

Beattie sees several advantages to installing a green roof.

—Aesthetics: "A green expanse of lush vegetation looks great," Beattie says. "Even in winter, brown plants and soils will look a lot better than a grimy gravel roof."

—Durability: Using a vegetated roof eliminates the large temperature extremes and fluctuations that cause cracking and failure in flat roofs. "Europeans estimate that roof life can be doubled by using green roofs," Berghage says.

—Energy Savings: The insulation provided by an expanse of plants across a roof can reduce the energy load required to heat or cool the building.

'Vegetation is a natural temperature moderator," Beattie says. "That's why it feels cooler in the middle of your lawn than it does in the middle of your driveway."

According to Berghage, green roofs also can alleviate the temperature rise associated with large metropolitan areas. "In big cities such as Washington, D.C., and Philadelphia, where asphalt, concrete and building materials absorb and radiate heat, the temperature can be 10 to 15 degrees higher than nearby suburban areas," he says. "The loss of green space in cities can be reduced by using green roofs."

Beattie says green roofs require more structural support than a conventional flat roof, but enough support for a vegetative roofing system can easily be built into new construction projects or an extensive re-roofing project. "You have to provide an irrigation and drainage system, which requires additional support," Beattie explains. "Also rain and snow would add weight to the soil."

This winter, Beattie and Berghage will test different plant materials and explore how Pennsylvania's winter conditions affect green roofs. In addition, they will track how, and if, heat is retained within a building outfitted with a green roof. Eventually, the research team hopes to get permission to install a green roof system on an existing Penn State building.

'Using these systems doesn't mean you won't have to pull a few weeds or irrigate occasionally, but that can be handled on a contract basis with the maintenance organization doing the building landscaping," Beattie says. "This isn't zero maintenance, but it is minimum maintenance."

Stream MAP of Pennsylvania

Why every fisherman needs this map

It is estimated that 10% of all the fishermen catch 90% of the fish. Regardless of which group you fall into... there's a sure way to up your odds... simply try new fishing waters. Fish where few fishermen ever fish.

Pennsylvania is loaded with great fishing waters...many of them overlooked. From the Lake Erie tributaries to the Delaware River...thousands of miles of streams, lakes and rivers are now easy-to-locate on one map.

Professor Higbee's Stream Map of Pennsylvania is the first and only highly detailed map of its kind.

This 3-foot-by-5-foot color map shows virtually all of the 45,000 miles of Pennsylvania streams plus lakes.

Professor Higbee's STREAMS ®

The STREAM MAP OF PENNSYLVANIA was completed in 1965 after a thirty-year effort by Howard Higbee, a former Penn State Professor.

The map is also known as the LOST STREAM MAP to some anglers.

Professor Higbee succeeded in creating a map of the highest detail possible...a map that shows every stream and lake. He painstakingly plotted by hand, the location of 45,000 miles of streams onto a 3 x 5 foot map.

The map sold extremely well -- until it was lost several years later. Incredibly, the printer entrusted with the original drawing and printing plates declared bankruptcy, then carelessly hauled Higbee's 30 years of work to a landfill.

The few remaining dog-eared copies became a prized fisherman's possession. Professor Higbee was offered $400 for one of his last maps. And state agencies were forced to keep their copies under lock and key.

Experts told Professor Higbee that reprints were impossible, because the maps were printed in non-photographic blue.

Then, in 1991, at the age of 91, Howard Higbee's dream came true. Computers made it possible to reprint the map. Holding an updated map, Howard said, "I never thought I'd live to see this day."

on the racetrack scene. The owners of Jiffy peanut butter, Mr. Coffee, a Lear jet producer, and the developer of Barney have used Brook Ledge hauling for their horses.

In addition to spending approximately 90 days a year on the road with the trucks, Bill, 68, also helps take care of the farm's resident dairy with the help of a farm manager and her two daughters.

The morning milking starts at 4:45, when more than 100 cows are milked. In addition Bill takes care of the 400 tillable acres of the farm, which yield corn, wheat, alfalfa, and the straw used to bed the trailers. The remaining 100 acres serves as pasture for the dairy.

"I've been involved on a dairy farm since I was 13, off and on," said Bill. He started dairy farming immediately after high school and bought the home farm in 1957.

Food Sticks To Ribs Longer Than You Think

How long does it take for the body to digest food?

That depends on a lot of things. But sometimes it can take more than three days for the food that enters your mouth to be completely digested and the indigestible portion to go out the other end.

First, the food you eat moves from the mouth, through the esophagus and into the stomach. On average, the stomach holds about four cups of food and continues the digestive process that started in the mouth and that continues in the esophagus on the way down.

The stomach's secretions of acid and enzymes makes a sort of soupy substance, called chyme. The stomach starts digesting protein, and absorbs some fats and alcohol. Chyme that contains a lot of fat usually stays in the stomach longer than chyme that has a lot of carbohydrate. Generally, chyme leaves the stomach about two to four hours after food is first eaten.

But that's not the end of your dinner's travels. When chyme leaves the stomach, it enters the nearly 10-foot-long coil called the small intestine. This is actually where most digestion takes place, absorbing nutrients with the help of enzymes that are made by the intestine, the liver and the pancreas. It can take as few as three hours and as many as 10 hours for chyme to pass through the small intestine.

Next comes the large intestine, or colon. The large intestine absorbs water and minerals for the body to use, but by this point, almost all digestion has already taken place. Still, this is where the food you've eaten hours beforehand resides the longest. It takes about 24 to 72 hours for food to work its way through the 3.5-foot-long tube called the large intestine before your body excretes it.

Add up all the numbers and you'll find that the food you eat at breakfast one day can take as few as 29 hours, or until you're approaching lunchtime the following day, to work its way through your system. Sometimes, though, it can take as long as 86 hours, or more than three and a half days, for a meal to finally say good-bye to your gastrointestinal tract.

Why Should We Compost?

Most of the garbage from our households is taken to landfills and buried.

Unfortunately, we produce so much garbage that even our landfills are overflowing.

Lucky for us, composting can help cut down on the amount of garbage we produce-a big help to the environment!

Composting can be used to dispose of things like grass clippings, leaves, brush, plant cuttings and kitchen scraps-leftover bits of food. By composting these items, we return organic matter to the soil, a very healthy thing. Organic matter improves plant growth by helping good microorganisms grow and loosening heavy soils so plant roots can grow deeper into the ground. It also helps sandy soils hold water and nutrients. Basically, healthy soils mean healthy plants. And healthy plants help clean the air, conserve soil, and make the landscape more beautiful.

When you make a compost pile, bacteria, fungi, insects, and even earthworms help break it down and return nutrients to the soil.

Hitting Your Home For A Loan

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — It wasn't supposed to be this way. They told us before the contractors started digging the foundation, this was the "starter home." But when the family began to grow, so did home values and remodeling proved easier than finding a decent house to buy.

You're not alone. Home values are increasing at a record pace across the country, prompting many homeowners to reinvest that newly gained equity back into their homes rather than relocate. But what's the best way to raise cash for the contractor?

Home Equity Loans

The practice of borrowing against the value of a home has gained in popularity over the last 10 years. According to the National Home Equity Mortgage Association (www.nhema.org), home equity loans will hit $500 billion this year compared to $34 billion 10 years ago. There are three key reasons for this surge: escalating home values, low interest and tax deductibility.

There are two ways to tap into the home equity of your home. The right choice for you depends on your needs. If you're looking for a fixed, lump-sum amount, perhaps for a major home improvement project, you're better off with a home equity loan. With a home equity loan, the term, and usually the interest rate and monthly payment, remain the same over the life of the loan.

If you want the convenience of drawing against your credit line as the need arises, a home equity line of credit — also known as a HELOC — is more likely to meet your objectives. Instead of borrowing a fixed amount of money, you qualify for a certain amount of credit. You then can borrow up to your credit limit whenever the need arises. The money is accessible instantly, usually by writing checks assigned to the amount or by using a credit card issued by the lender.

Regardless of the route you take, shop lenders to get the best rate and terms. Include the following questions when considering a home equity product and lender:

• What am I paying in interest?

Interest rates vary among lenders, so query several and compare the annual percentage rate (APR). Remember, the APR is based upon the interest rate alone. For a true comparison of credit costs, compare other charges, such as points, fees, and closing costs. If the lender is offering an introductory "teaser" rate, be sure to find out what rate you will be paying after the promotional period ends.

• What is the index based on and how often can it change?

The interest rate on a variable-rate loan must be based on a publicly available index. Most lenders use the prime interest rate. In today's market, you should look for a lender that offers the prime interest rate for the life of your loan. In any case, you shouldn't have to pay more than two points above prime. It's also important to know how often the lender adjusts the rate.

• How much can the rate increase?

Under current law, all variable-rate plans must have a cap on how high your interest rate can climb over the life of the plan. Most variable-rate lines of credit also have a cap that limits how much and how often the rate can change during the course of a year.

• What are the closing costs?

Closing costs, which may include (but are not limited to) a title search, appraisal, attorney fees, recording charges, and notary fees, also vary from lender to lender. With financial institutions vigorously competing for the home equity market, you should be able to negotiate waiving some or all of the closing costs. But shop carefully, as some lenders impose a fee for each time you access the account, and others charge for not using it.

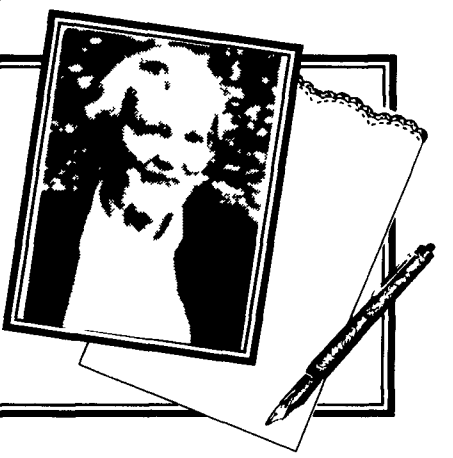
• What are the repayment terms?

Usually, you repay the loan in regular installments. Paying more than the minimum monthly payment will pay off the loan faster and reduce your costs. Check your terms, though. Early repayment may have a penalty attached. Unless it is absolutely necessary, avoid interest-only repayment options in which you pay on the interest during the term of the loan and the balance is due at the end of the term. This option can prove much more costly.

Ida's Notebook

by

Ida Risser



Last week I mentioned that we were going to fly to Indiana to visit our daughter and her family. She had her third baby boy last month — he is our fifteenth grandchild.

Well, the trip ended up being an adventure! We got up at 4 a.m. to fly out of Harrisburg. Our son drove us there as we'd be gone five days. We landed in the Cincinnati Airport which is in northern Kentucky. Then we flew to South Bend which is in Indiana. But, instead of landing there, the pilot announced that he could not land, due to weather conditions, and so he was going to fly us back to Cincinnati.

What!!

We were given a seat on a later plane to South Bend, but then it too was cancelled before it left the ground.

Next we were told we would fly to Kalamazoo in Michigan and then be bussed back to South Bend. We sat on the plane one and one-half hours before it took off and then had a rough hour ride on an old small bus to South Bend where our daughter who expected us at 9 a.m. finally met us at three in the afternoon. She had to run back and forth between her home and the airport several times with her tiny baby.

We had nice weather for our visit in her big, beautiful home. They live on a lake in a wooded area. She took us for a ride on their pontoon boat. Later she drove us to Lansing, Michigan, where my sister lives. She too had a new home which we had not seen before, as they moved into a new community.

Soon our daughter's two-month leave will be over and she will go back to work. She gave us a tour of the fruit juice plant where she works. Everything is very automated and we saw very few people. They send many truckloads of juice out of the plant everyday.

Now I better finish picking the pole limas as there are quite a few still on the vines. There is always work to do around our home.

'User-Friendly' Ozone Ready To Become Latest Tool For FoodSafety

PALO ALTO, Calif. — It leaves no taste, odor or flavor. But by passing the Food and Drug Administration's (FDA) initial review in an extremely rigorous process, it has the potential to become the next major tool for the safe treatment, storage and processing of nearly every type of food, including meats, poultry, fruits and vegetables, in the U.S.

With scientists continually studying ways to ensure the ongoing protection of the food supply, for the past several years EPRI's (Electric Power Research Institute) Agriculture and Food Technology Alliance (AFTA) has coordinated an effort to review the use of ozone as a food safety additive, and then to obtain formal federal authorization for this additive.

Though ozone has been used in other countries in food processing, and in the U.S., for water treatment, FDA regulations never listed it as an approved food additive. Despite the designation of ozone in 1997 as "Generally Recognized as Safe" (GRAS) by an independent panel convened by EPRI, this still meant federal approval of ozone use required an extensive petition for consideration by the FDA, which already has accepted it, filed it, and designated it for expedited review — a major hurdle to pass since only one out of every 10 to 12 petitions makes it to the filing stage. Final action on the petition is expected by no later than next February.

"Although the food safety system has worked well, it's important to get ahead of the curve, and the use of ozone as an antimicrobial agent can help the industry do that," said Dr. Chuck Sopher, director of EPRI's AFTA, which is based in Washington, D.C.

"Consumers view microbial — meaning germ and bacteria contamination as their highest food safety concern, and the organisms responsible for diseases continue to mutate. Ozone is an extremely "user-friendly' agent the represents another weapon in the arsenal to help assure the long-term safety of the U.S. food supply."

According to Dr. Dee Graham, manager of EPRI's AFTA Food Office, ozone works as an oxidant to damage the cell walls of harmful microorganisms, thus killing them and leaving only oxygen — but no tastes, odors or flavors — as a by-product. Also, because of ozone's short half-life, it leaves no residual in the food (unlike chlorine).

Appreciating Depreciation: The Invisible Cost Of Vehicle Ownership

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — When considering the costs associated with purchasing a new vehicle — insurance, maintenance, loan interest — don't forget to factor in depreciation. You won't find it on the sticker price, nor will you be billed for it. You may not even notice it until the time comes to sell your car. Still, depreciation can cost you big money over the years.

In the first year you own a new car, the vehicle may lose 20 percent of its original value due to depreciation, according to IntelliChoice (www.intellichoice.com), based in California, which provides consumers with data about the true cost of owning cars and trucks. By the end of the fifth year, the value drops by an average of 35.1 percent.

It's not only buyers who pay the price. Depreciation also affects the cost of leasing as well because leasing payments are based in part on what a vehicle will be worth at lease-end. The more it depreciates, the less value it will have at lease-end. So, you can lease a vehicle with the same sticker price as the one your neighbor's leased but pay a higher monthly lease payment if yours depreciates at a faster rate.

You can't stop depreciation, but you can lessen the impact it will have on your wallet. Here are a few points to consider from Home & Family Finance Magazine:

• Some makes and models depreciate faster than others. Accurately predicting depreciation is difficult because so much depends on a vehicle's continuing popular appeal. But you can get a rough idea how much it will depreciate. Consult a "blue book" or other pricing guides to find out how well previous years' models have held their value. The Credit Union National Association Web site has a depreciation calculator. Go to www.cuna.org and select "calculators."

• The pace of depreciation levels off after five years. Hanging on to a vehicle for at least that long minimizes the impact of depreciation on the overall cost of ownership.

• It's smart to pick options that will appeal to the next buyer. Vehicles with air conditioning, automatic transmissions, sunroofs, and convertible tops tend to hold their resale value better. Lesser known models, "luxury" or "limited edition" models, and those with odd colors or features tend to depreciate faster.

• Vehicles that change dramatically in style from one year to the next tend to lose resale value faster. Last year's model quickly becomes outdated and loses its attraction to potential buyers. Choose a vehicle from a manufacturer that makes only subtle style changes each year.

• Depreciation can deal a substantial financial blow to the owner of a new vehicle. But it can work to your advantage if you're in the market to buy or lease one that is used. A model that depreciates considerably in its early years may be an excellent deal as a used car.

Immunizations Work

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — "The risk of severe neurological damage or death is much greater from the illness itself than from immunization," said Dr. Norman Fienman at the Lancaster County Immunization Coalition dinner.

To reinforce the need to protect children from childhood illnesses, Fienman showed slides of children who contracted diphtheria, tetanus, pertussis, measles, mumps, rubella, and other illnesses that can be prevented through immunizations.

The graphic pictures showed children with distended stomachs from contracting Hepatitis B, severe skin infections from chicken pox and other diseases with rashes, bulging infected eyes ruined forever from varicella, and feverish children with lasting brain damage.

Members of the coalition are concerned about the complacency toward vaccine preventable diseases. They work to increase immunization rates through educating primary care providers.

Confusing reports sometimes cause parents and primary care providers to be wary of immunization. But Fienman stressed: "The disease itself is always more dangerous than the shot itself."

He added, "Never expose children to disease in order to build their immunity. A child may have a reaction to the disease and be one of percentage that dies or has severe lasting side effects." Many people mistakenly believe that chicken pox and mumps are mild illnesses, but Fienman himself almost died from complications with chicken pox and showed pictures of children with severe side effects.

"Immunizations are completely safe," Fienman said. He said there is no evidence that immunizations cause debilitating side effects. He believes it is unfortunate that some people blame anything that happens to a child within five years of a shot on the immunization.

"Immunizations add to the quality of life. It keeps children healthy and saves lives," the pediatrician said.

All children need vaccines. Some vaccines are given by injection and others orally by drops in the mouth.

Vaccines cause the body to make antibodies to help the body fight disease. Some vaccines protect for life, others may need to be repeated.

Before immunizations were available, many diseases reached epidemic proportions and caused brain damage, convulsions, paralysis, liver disease, encephalitis, infections, dehydration, and death.

Immunizations are provided free or at a low cost for children. It is necessary to keep a written record, which is required by state law for school entrance.

For more information, call your doctor, health department, or the National Immunization Information Hotline 1-800-232-2522.

"The risk of severe neurological damage or death is much greater from the illness itself than from immunization," said Dr. Norman Fienman at the Lancaster County Immunization Coalition dinner.

Dietitians Learn AboutBeef At Denver Conference

DENVER, Colo. — More than 9,500 dietitians and other health professionals had their confidence in beef's nutrition reinforced at The American Dietetic Association (ADA) Food & Nutrition Conference & Exhibition in Denver Oct. 16-19. Beef checkoff-funded programs at the event helped generate tremendous visibility for beef nutrition and the industry's efforts to join with dietitians in promoting healthy lifestyles for Americans.

"This event demonstrated to me that we're getting our message out to dietitians," according to Jay O'Brien, a rancher from Amarillo, Tex., and chairman of the beef industry's Nutrition & Health Committee.

O'Brien helped staff the beef industry booth at the event and actively communicated with dietitians there, as well as at a special workshop and the ADA Foundation dinner. Other beef producers assisting at the event were Wade Zimmerman, a beef producer from Sugar City, Colo., and chairman of the beef industry's Health Professional Influencers Subcommittee, and Nelson Curry, a beef producer from Paris, Ky., and vice chairman of the Nutrition & Health Committee.

"At the booth we continually heard positive statements about beef," said O'Brien. "These comments demonstrate that our work is helping turn around dietary perceptions about beef."

The industry's checkoff-funded "Everyday Heroes" campaign was one of the efforts making a significant impression on dietitians at the events. One of programs was a workshop attended by approximately 1,000 professionals called "Women as Everyday Heroes: Understanding and Shaping Their Nutritional, Physical and Emotional Needs Across the Lifecycle." The workshop showed beef as an important solution for women to overcome key nutrition and physical activity challenges. The workshop featured three members of the beef industry's Council for Women's Nutrition Solutions (CWNS).

A booth at which samples of convenient, microwaveable pot roast were distributed was another checkoff-supported program at the event. At the banquet, the National Cattlemen's Beef Association received the prestigious Corporate Award for Excellence 2000 from the Foundation for the organization's many years of checkoff-funded support of, and work with, registered dietitians, the ADA and the ADA Foundation.

"It was exciting to see the level of enthusiasm that the dietitians had for our products," according to Curry, who says the industry needs to continue to target this audience. "It's through these professionals that we can communicate our message most effectively. We're proving to them that beef is a product that can fit into a healthful diet."

The beef industry's booth at the exhibition featured four stations at which attendees were able to both sample beef and learn about beef industry nutrition efforts. Information about the various nutrition materials available through the beef checkoff was also provided.

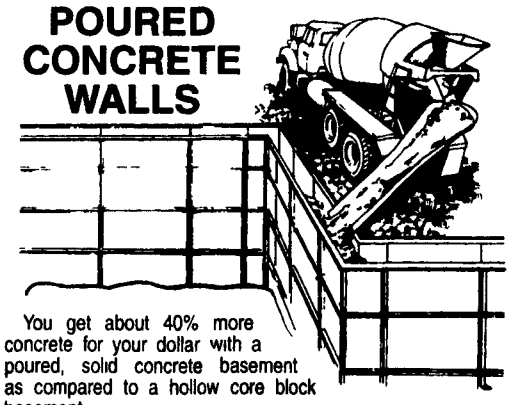
POURED SOLID CONCRETE
STORAGE SYSTEM SPECIALISTS

START WITH THE BEST!
POURED CONCRETE WALLS



You get about 40% more concrete for your dollar with a poured, solid concrete basement as compared to a hollow core block basement

A poured solid concrete basement weighs about 50 lbs more per cubic foot! Far denser What's more, poured solid concrete walls are monolithic . .there are no joints!

This is why laboratory tests show poured, solid concrete basements have many times the flexural and compressive strength to withstand the side and down pressures caused by earth, wind, water and building loads and the material density to resist water penetration

Best of all, thanks to modern and efficient construction techniques, poured, solid concrete basements are competitively priced

Solid Concrete For:
- Manure Pit Walls
- Hog House Walls
- Barnyard Walls
- Chicken House Walls
- Retaining Walls
- House Foundation Walls
- Silage Pit Walls
- Cistern Walls
- Concrete Decks
- Concrete Pit Tops

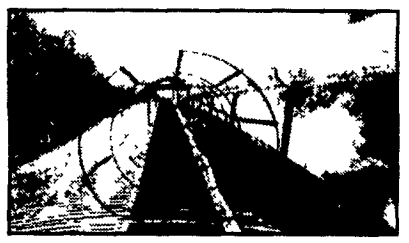
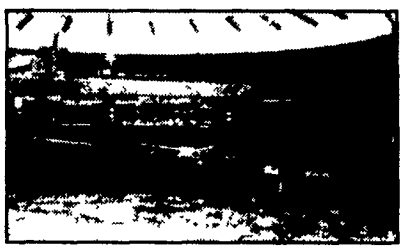
Silo Unloader Technology Takes a Giant Leap Forward!

BIG JIM. Quantum™ SYSTEM

TOWER SILOS REALLY MEASURE UP!





Measure for measure, nothing beats a tower silo for storing forage. Just compare them to bunkers which have up to 45% storage loss, lower capacity, increased labor and lots of inconvenience

Towers lose just 3% to 7% because of gravity, feed weight and a good unloader like the Big Jim QUANTUM System.

QUANTUM can be installed in any type of 20' to 30' forage silo. conventional or oxygen limited and will make your tower silo even better!

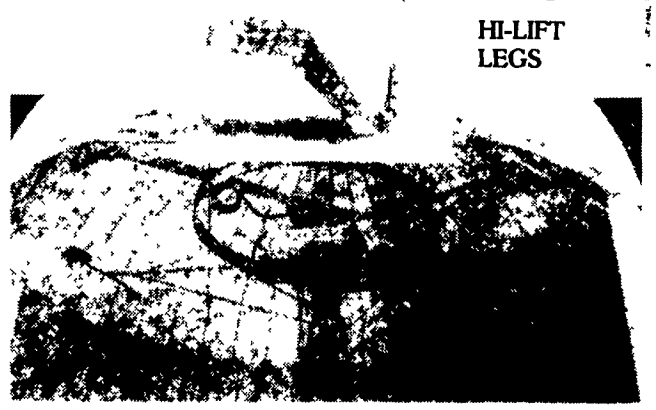
VOLUMAXX

GIVES YOU A CHOICE OF DISTRIBUTION

HI-LIFT LEGS



The new advance design Volumaxx unloader gives you the best of both worlds... your choice of distribution. New HI-LIFT legs let you raise the unloader an extra 15" into the silo roof, so you can use a conventional side distributor. Or, choose the Jamesway Powermaxx™ broad pan silage distributor. With proper distribution, you'll have better quality feed, and you'll increase your silo's capacity up to 35%. And we can prove it!

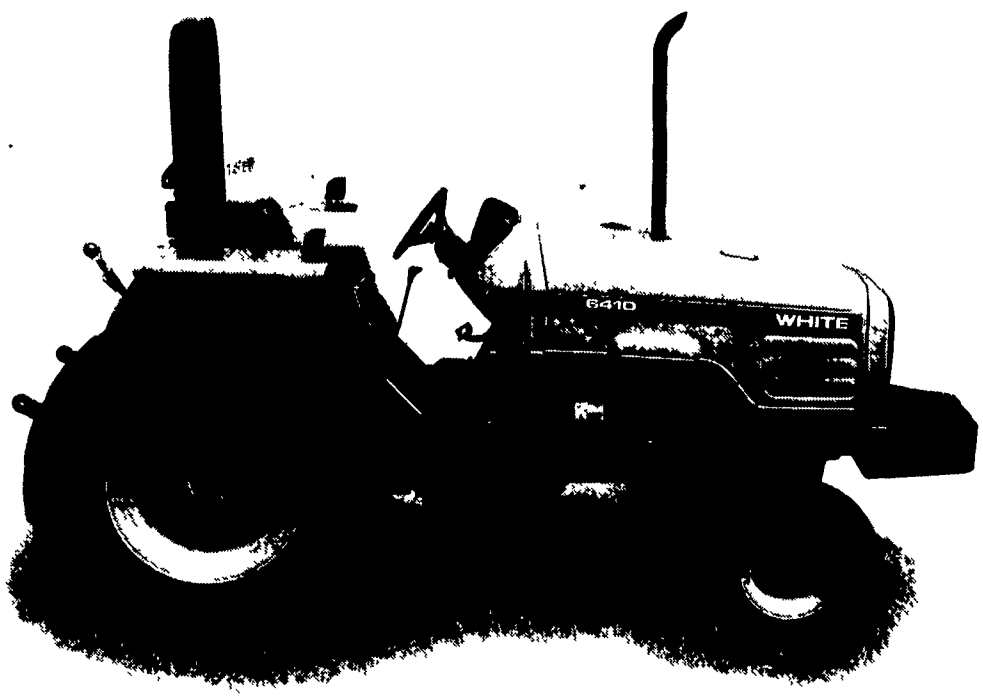
"I need a tractor that works hard and drives easy."



All I Need Is A WHITE.

Convenience.
The 6410 is a pleasure to drive, thanks to a high-visibility, low-profile hood, easy-to-read gauges on the convenient front panel and easy-to-reach controls in the right-hand console. Which means your 6410 can work hard, while you take it easy.

Engine.
Under the low-profile hood of the 70 PTO hp 6410, the turbocharged, Cummins B3.9 engine burns clean and efficiently. And with up to 40% fewer parts than others in its class, it knows how to keep working for you, day after day.

Transmission.
The 6410's standard 12 x 4 Partial Synchro transmission delivers unparalleled operating efficiency. Or choose the optional 12 x 12 Syncro/Shuttle for even greater versatility. Either way, a wet multi-disc clutch adds durability.

Comfort.
Standard spring-suspension, 4-way adjustable seating makes you at home in either the cab or fold-down ROPS model. An optional air-ride, swivel seat in the cab, along with standard air and heat, pamper you while you work.

BUSINESS ❖ NEWS

On Oct. 9, Hernley's Farm Equipment, Inc. became the newest Polaris ATV, snowmobile and ranger dealer in Lancaster County. From left, Duane and Sylvia Hernley, and Lynn and Jason McClenaghan.

Polaris Dealership Changes Ownership

ELIZABETHTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — On Oct. 9, Hernley's Farm Equipment, Inc. became the newest Polaris ATV, snowmobile and ranger dealer in Lancaster County.

Hernley's purchased the business from J & H Cycle Accessories, Inc. of Mount Joy.

Jason and Harry McClenaghan, former owners, began their business in 1983, offering motorcycle repairs and accessories. In 1987, they became a full service Polaris ATV and snowmobile dealer serving the central Pennsylvania area. With the retirement of Harry McClenaghan, it became necessary to make this business change to allow the business to continue to grow. Jason and Lynn McClenaghan will be joining the Hernley team to assist with Polaris parts, sales and service.

Duane and Sylvia Hernley began their farm equipment business in 1986. They are a full service Agco dealer in Elizabethtown. They have been avid ATV and snowmobile owners for years. Because these two types of products are closely related, this was a natural mix.

Hernley's offers a full line of Polaris ATV, snowmobile, and ranger parts, garments, and accessories. They are a Polaris Master Service Dealer, offering full-service and warranty repairs by appointment. Hernley's will continue to offer Pennsylvania State inspections for motorcycles and light motorcycle service by appointment. A full line of motorcycle related accessories and apparel will be available.

DuPont Qualicon Releases New Test Kits For Biotech Foods

WILMINGTON, Del. — DuPont Qualicon has introduced the first in a series of test kits that food processors can use themselves to determine if biotech ingredients are present in food products.

Previously, these sophisticated DNA-based tests were available only in the Qualicon Molecular Typing Lab in Wilmington, Del. The kits will enable food processors to easily and inexpensively establish systems to ensure the authenticity of ingredients in the supply chain.

Unlike tests for proteins that can be broken down by heating and other food processing, the Qualicon test kits look for specific DNA sequences that can be detected with equal ease in raw materials, ingredients, and finished products.

The Bax® System PCR Assay for Screening Qualitative GMO can indicate whether a sample of raw or processed soy or corn food, ingredient, or crop contains a threshold level of genetically enhanced components. The kit works by detecting the presence of the 35S promoter gene that is found in 95 percent of commercially available biotech corn and soy.

The Bax® System PCR Assay for GMO Quantification can provide a precise determination of the percentage of genetically enhanced material contained in a sample of a soy-based food or ingredient.

Both test kits employ the same principle as the company's Bax® system kits for detecting pathogenic bacteria in food. The PCR (polymerase chain reaction) technique, used by leading labs, is internationally recognized as the fastest, most accurate method for detecting and quantifying GMO. Through the use of proprietary technology, the Bax® system makes it easy for food processing operations and service labs to employ this advanced technique. Purchase of the kit includes conveniently tableted PCR reagents along with a license to practice PCR and sell the results.

Additional DNA-based tests for biotech ingredients are under development. "Qualicon has responded to the food industry's need for a standard, consistent, reproducible test," said Qualicon Chairman and CEO James C. Porter. "Our customers can be confident that Qualicon employs the most sophisticated technology, the highest safety standards and the best scientific expertise which are hallmarks of DuPont."

Combo-Mulch Finishers Offer Options For Every Operation

RACINE, Wis. — The new Case IH 4400 and 4450 combo-mulch finishers offer farmers unmatched versatility with five sizes, three shank offerings, five harrow options, and an industry first adjustable disk gang angle on a seedbed finishing machine.

"These finishers combine multiple tillage operations into a true one-pass system," said Keith Whitaker, Case IH product and marketing manager, tillage. "That means farmers will save on labor, fuel and equipment wear.

"In addition, multiple sizes, shank and harrow options allow these machines to be configured to meet the needs of producers with varied acreages, soil types, residue conditions and horsepower needs."

These productivity-enhancing machines feature a spacious five-rank design and massive mainframe, resulting in excellent residue flow and distribution, creating superior seedbed conditions.

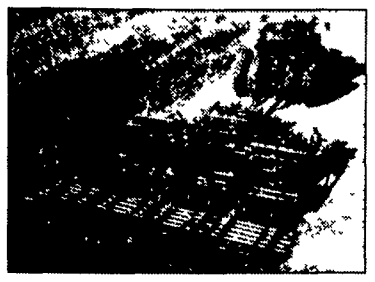
Both the 4400 and 4450 feature field-proven Cushion Gang® spring-cushioned disk blades to aggressively cut and size residue ahead of the cultivator shanks. The Cushion Gang disk offers a patent-pending adjustable disk gang angle.

The adjustable disk gang has a five- to 10-degree range. A five-degree disk angle allows faster operating speeds with less soil movement and residue cover. The 10-degree disk angle provides more aggressive soil movement and more residue cover.

The 4400 is equipped with a standard 20-inch diameter disk gang on 7.5-inch spacing, and the 4450 features 22-inch diameter disk blades on 9-inch spacing.

Operators working in low-to-moderate residue levels following fall tillage will want to consider the 4400 combo-mulch finisher. Vibra® Shanks on a 6.7-inch spacing offer an excellent option in moderate soil conditions where a high-action, spring-tension shank is desired. In addition, Vibra Edge® shanks are specially designed with the facing edge of the shank turned forward for increased residue clearance, as well as reduced soil disturbance and fuel consumption.

The 4450 model is best suited for heavier residue and high-yielding stubble field conditions. With either the Vibra Edge shank or Vibra Chisel® shank on 9-inch spacing, the 4450 unit can prepare a firm, level seedbed, leaving up to 70 percent residue cover. When working in heavy soil and rocky field conditions, the Vibra Chisel shank with a 220-pound point load and in-line tension spring is the perfect choice. This extremely strong shank allows the operator to easily travel through heavier soils and adverse conditions while maintaining shank depth control and creating an optimum seedbed.



In just one pass, the new Case IH 4400 combo-mulch finisher will prepare a field for planting. This versatile and productivity-enhancing implement will cut residue, loosen soil, and level the field to allow precise planting.

Five harrow options allow farmers to further customize the finishers for their operations. These options are:

- Four-bar spring-tine harrow, providing superior residue flow and distribution
- Five-bar spike-tooth harrow, which is ideal for moderate clod sizing and leveling
- Three-bar spike-tooth harrow with a single rolling basket, combining seedbed condition and clod sizing with firming and leveling
- Five-bar spike-tooth harrow with a single rolling basket, providing superior seedbed conditioning and clod sizing, as well as firming and leveling
- Three-bar spike-tooth harrow with double rolling baskets, creating the ideal seedbed, with excellent seedbed conditioning, clod sizing, firming, and leveling.

Mechanical depth control is standard on both the 4400 and 4450, but operators looking to make fast and easy changes to react to changing field conditions should consider one or both optional hydraulic depth control systems.

First, from the comfort of the cab, operators can vary the depth of the disk gang to make residue-cutting adjustments with hydraulic depth control of the Cushion Gang disk gang.

"Secondly, for customers who frequently change the depth of the entire implement, our hydraulic over mechanical depth control provides a superior solution," said Whitaker. "When a finisher's main frame travels directly behind the tractor in mellow soils, it may ride lower in the tractor's tire tracks. Mechanical depth control allows the operator to independently set the depth of each frame section to compensate.

"To accommodate changing field conditions, the single-point hydraulic depth control system allows the operator to simultaneously change the depth of the entire machine with one simple adjustment, while maintaining the relative depth settings of each section which were set mechanically."

"In addition to single-point hydraulic depth control, a self-leveling hitch, wing flex and heavy-duty walking beam axles will help the 4400 and 4450 stay level and move over the ground smoothly and consistently for precision and uniformity," he said.

A self-leveling hitch is standard equipment on both models. By operating the mechanical cranks, the implement can be adjusted to match the tractor drawbar height. As a result, even when in transport and with different harrow attachments on the rear of the machine, the finisher will stay level from front to rear. In addition, the tongue-mounted pull point is positioned to ensure a level and even pull. With a high pull point, the weight transfer is reduced on the rear of the implement during field operation.

The wings of both the 4400 and 4450 flex 10 degrees upward and nine degrees downward to follow uneven terrain and contours in the field. Wing flex helps maintain a consistent seedbed depth for ideal planting conditions.

Heavy-duty mainframe and wing walking-beam axles are standard equipment on all 4400 and 4450 machines, except the 18-foot sizes. These axles increase the machine's ability to float over wet or soft soils, provide a smooth ride over the roughest field conditions, and maintain a uniform working depth in uneven terrain.

The implement's hitch is long enough to allow a tight turn without interfering with the tractor's rear dual or triple tires. A standard swinging hose stand allows the machine's operator to move hydraulic hoses up and out of the way of the hitch for easy maintenance and to eliminate hose damage.

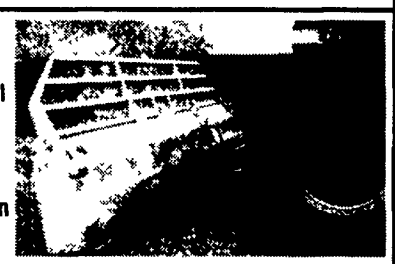
Purchase Heavy Duty Rock Collection Equipment From BINKLEY & HURST BROS. Today! Remove Field Rock & Save Your Equipment. Check Our Finance Plans.

In the Degelman tradition of quality rock removal equipment, here is the RR1500 rock rake, another example of Degelman's continuing commitment to excellence.

The RR1500 rock rake includes a unique auto-fold system which provides safe, easy transport no wider than most tractors (8 feet in transport position) with full use of the 14 foot width in the working position. And with hydraulic angling, it can take full advantage of the 10 to 30 degree angling range.

Degelman Rock Rakes are excellent machines for grooming fairways and conditioning soil for the construction of golf courses. It leaves a beautiful final finish preparing the course for seeding. They are also used for reclaiming gravel on gravel roads. And the heavy duty construction and quality workmanship means that it is built to last.

Degelman



From Small Tractors to Large 4 Wheel Drive Sizes (Many Uses for a Heavy Duty Degelman Dozer Blade)

From leveling Silage in Bunks and Grading Excavation to Snow Removal, See Binkley & Hurst For Your Needs!

The SIGNATURE 6000 may be the only rock picker you'll ever need. This is the most rugged rock picker on the market. Some of the SIGNATURE 6000 features include:

Solid Shaft Grill Tines with Replaceable Grill Tips - This modern grill is easier to maintain, has longer life giving you less down time. The unique grill provides five feet of clean sifting and virtually jamless performance.

Grated Hopper Bottom - We use spring steel straps in the hopper, engineered to bounce back in shape.

Hydraulic Drive - The most popular drive on rock pickers is hydraulic which is standard on the 6000. We have incorporated a relief valve to take away the shock when disengaging the drive.

Reel Assembly - The three paddle reel has a large diameter, hard sufaced teeth and heavy duty paddles.

Flotation Tires - The 16.5L x 16.1 flotation tires are standard equipment and are a must to reduce soil compaction.

Swing Pole - Easy to maneuver in both working or transport position.

For Him, Breaking Up Is Easy To Do

"I started running DMI in the early 90's, and I have been impressed ever since. I must not be too disappointed, I have owned 3 of them!"

David Smith
Church Hill, MD

Dave Smith tills around 2000 acres on Maryland's Eastern Shore, and he needs a tough tillage tool that really works his ground Unlike conventional tillage tools, the DMI 730 Subsoiler aggressively twists and rolls the soil while laterally fracturing the hardpan

"I own a DMI 730 Subsoiler now and I really like running it in the fall I run it just below the hardpan and the tool really does a good job getting the compaction out, I like that," says David "I could see big clumps of compacted soil coming up when I ran the DMI, and that helps the soil for the percolation of water and lets the roots get down " This process creates warmer soil in the spring for earlier planting and more uniform crop germination

And Hoober has the knowledge, service and parts support you need to make sure your DMI deep tillage machines keep running strong "Hoober's a good organization - they really aim to please the farmer," says David "Their service is excellent, and they always keep me going They have good men in the parts department, and a lot of times I can call in the morning and have a part delivered right to my door at the end of the day "

The combination of DMI's 730 Subsoiler and Hoober, Inc. will help you get more bushels out of your field and that means more money in your pocket!

From Harvest To Tillage Thi

Still Simply the Best.

A Case-IH Rotary Axial-Flow Combine has only ONE moving part in it's entire threshing/separating process a single large-diameter rotor Open up the side shield on any other rotary combine and compare it to the drive mechanism, and you will see that the Case-IH rotary combine has fewer moving parts, which means fewer problems and easier adjustments Because the more moving parts there are, the greater your chance of breaking down

Introducing The New 2001 Model Axial Flow Combines
Making you even more productive with the following enhancements

Hydraulic Feeder Reverser
A new hydraulic feeder reverser, located on the left-hand side of the feeder jackshaft replaces the electric feeder reverser on previous models The reverser will deliver 50% more torque to the feeder driveshaft compared to the output of the electric reverser.

Side Adjust Sieve Ready - All Models
The 2001 model combines will be ready to accept a future side adjust sieve feature This will be available as a Service Parts Kit.

New View Door and Light the 2001 models will have a new side-viewing door with a light for easier visibility of the chopper and chaffer sieves.

12 Row Corn Head Capable
Factory options are available for the 2001 model 2388 to be capable of handling the size and weight of the 2200 series 12 row corn heads.

New Fuel Tank
The 2001 Model 2388 combines will have a new 180 gallon fuel tank - a 46% increase in capacity over the 123 gallon tank on previous models.

New Exit Lighting
This feature will enhance visibility when exiting the cab after dark. This light will stay lit for 30 seconds allowing the operator to exit down the ladder safely.

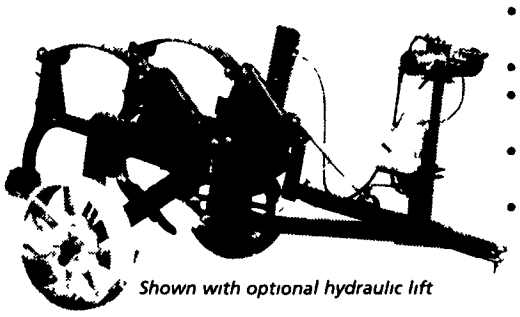
Increased Moisture Improves Crop Yields!

I&J Manufacturing Deep Till Slitter

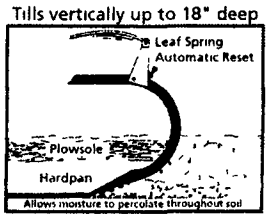
I&J Deep Till Slitter with Tebben automatic reset leaf spring till mechanisms:



Shown with optional hydraulic lift

- Available in 1 or 2 shank models
- Provides a 60" cut
- 12V hydraulic lift is optional
- 2 shank model weighs approx. 838 lbs.
- Available in 3pt or trailing models

Tills vertically up to 18" deep



With deep tilling, soil is tilled more on the vertical plane than the horizontal, leaving topsoil less disturbed. Commonly done in the fall to catch winter moisture & followed by a light disking in the spring to level the surface for uniform population.

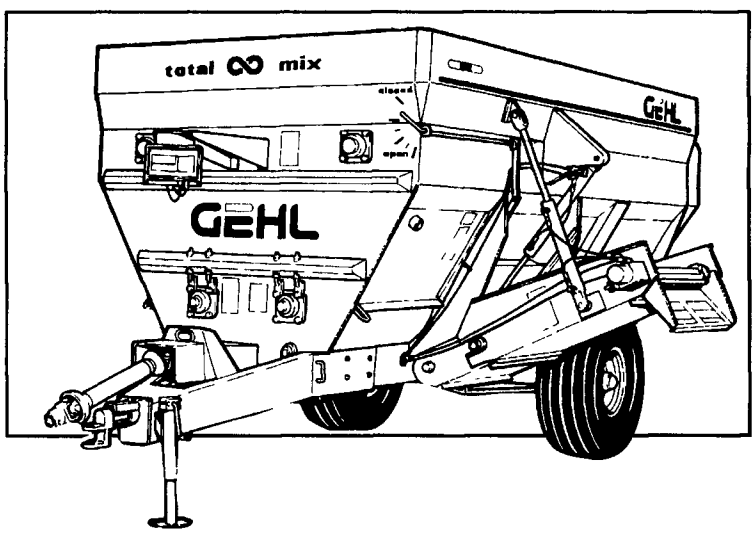
GEHL

YOUR LIVESTOCK IMPLEMENT LINE

TMR "Total Mix" Mixer Feeders



"Total Mix" TMR mixer feeders let you mix more long-stemmed hay into your ration - up to 30% by weight depending on hay type and moisture content.

- "Hay - slicer auger" - Incorporates knife assemblies into the two bottom augers
- Better mixing action - Four-auger design creates a double figure - 8 mixing pattern for fast and complete mixing of all feed ingredients.
- Energy efficient - Planetary drive system requires less horsepower
- Built to last - Patented star couplers absorb shock loads by allowing the bottom augers to flex, providing long service life.
- Five sizes - 150 to 455 cubic feet capacities.

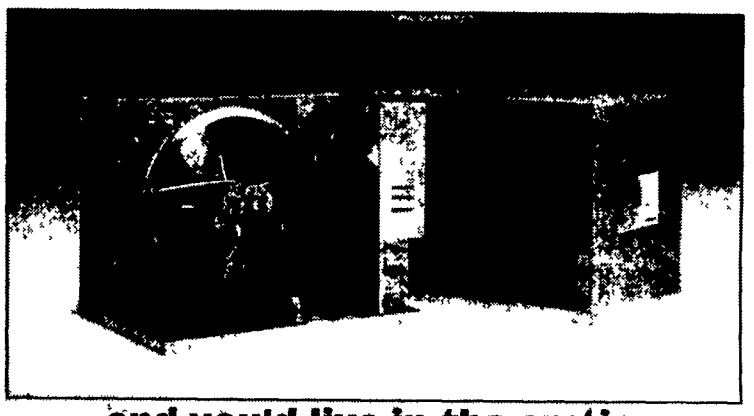
Cooling more efficient than this would be free...



and you'd live in the arctic.

The most energy-efficient cooling system in the world (excluding the Arctic Circle) can be found in the HiPerForm® Energy Star™ refrigeration unit by Mueller®

The HiPerForm refrigeration process is a proprietary system that floods the entire cooler evaporator using a subcooled liquid refrigerant that keeps your refrigeration at peak efficiency

The HiPerForm system enables the compressor to operate at cooler temperatures, resulting in longer compressor life, less maintenance, and less energy consumption

Until you move your operation north, you won't find a more efficient means of cooling your milk

Mueller is cool

President Clinton Signs Farm Spending Bill

WASHINGTON, D.C. — President Clinton recently signed into law the farm spending bill for this fiscal year.

The measure provides approximately $3.5 billion in disaster assistance for America's farmers and ranchers, who have been forced to contend with drought, floods, fires, and low prices this year, including $1.3 billion for crop loss payments, $667 million for dairy market loss payments, $450 million for livestock assistance, and $158 million for apple and cranberry growers.

"This assistance is sorely needed and we will be working hard to distribute it quickly," said U.S. Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman. "I know these funds will help prevent some small and medium size family farmers from going out of business."

At the same time, Glickman reiterated his strong desire to see a major rewrite of the 1996 farm bill "to provide farmers with a stronger and more reliable safety net instead of ad hoc disaster payments."

The appropriations bill also contains provisions sought by the Clinton-Gore Administration to help tens of thousands of the working poor. The measure relaxes restrictions on car ownership, so that people can access reliable transportation to get to work without sacrificing their food stamp benefits. There is also additional funding for food stamps outreach to help ensure that those eligible for the program are aware of the nutritional benefits available to them. The bill also includes funds to assist families using food stamps with high rent and utility expenses.

Glickman remained dismayed because "Congress has again failed to honor the President's repeated requests to restore food stamps for legal immigrants, and to provide funding for farmland protection efforts."

The bill fully funds President Clinton's Food Safety Initiative, which has revolutionized inspections and helped significantly decrease foodborne illnesses, while continuing to fund expanded food safety research.

The measure permits USDA to greatly expand its already substantial investment in rural America, increasing total rural development loan and grant funding by $2 billion to $13.2 billion. It also contains $24 million in development funding for Native American communities, that have not shared in our nation's prosperity.

Glickman expressed his concern about a provision which takes away a USDA under secretary's duties in managing national forests and conservation programs.

Lehigh County Celebrates The Preservation Of 10,000 Acres Of Farmland

ALLENTOWN (Lehigh Co.) — Agriculture Secretary Samuel Hayes joined Lehigh County Executive Jane S. Baker and members of the board of commissioners and Agricultural Land Preservation Board to celebrate the preservation of 10,000 acres of Lehigh County farmland.

"This 10,000-acre celebration is a huge milestone for Lehigh County," Baker said. "As we continue the Farmland Preservation Program, farming will continue to thrive and benefit Lehigh County. All residents will be able to continue to enjoy the outstanding countryside that surrounds us for generations to come."

The Farmland Preservation Program protects farmland from development through the purchase of perpetual agricultural conservation easements that place permanent legal restrictions on nonagricultural land development on farmland. Funding for this program comes from both the commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the county of Lehigh. The program is administered by the nine-member Lehigh County Agricultural Preservation Board.

On Sept. 13, Lehigh County officially preserved its 10,000th acre of farmland with agricultural conservation easements on 102 farms. Lehigh County is the fifth county in the commonwealth to achieve this preservation mark. More than 10 percent of Lehigh County's remaining 98,500 acres of farmland are now permanently protected.

The celebration was conducted recently at the Harold, Mildred, Kenneth and Diane Gehringer farm in New Smithville. The Weisenberg Township property includes 167 acres of farmland.

Diane Matthews-Gehringer is an owner of the farm and a member of the Agriculture Preservation Board. "My husband and mother and father-in-law join me in feeling very proud to have the Gehringer farm be a part of history as Pennsylvania becomes the national leader in farmland preservation," Matthews-Gehringer said. "As farmers and Lehigh County residents, we know the importance of maintaining land for the purpose of farming."

The Farmland Preservation Program offers the landowner the total of the conservation easement value, which runs between $1,200 and $3,000 per acre. The funds transferred from the county to the landowner do not make Lehigh County the owner of the land but the owner of the interest to prevent development on the property.

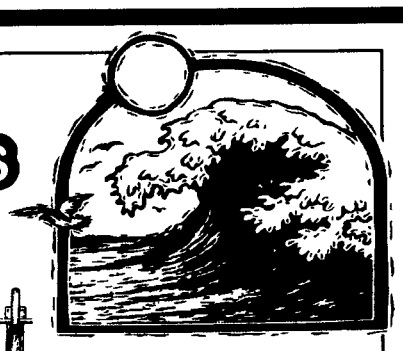
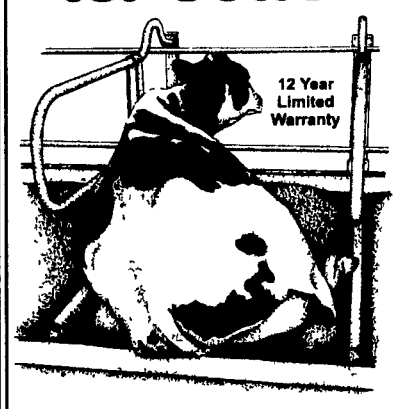
Waterbeds for Cows





ALANTA®

The ALANTA Waterbed for cows is a revolutionary product, comfortable, safe and hygienic. It clearly improves your cows' well-being and therefore promotes higher milk production. It is the ultimate stall floor covering for the modern, animal-friendly dairy farm.

WELL MADE
The ALANTA Waterbed is made of two rubber layers with a water-filled compartment in between. GD-Enerka gives a 12-year guarantee.

COMFORTABLE
The waterbed molds itself to the cow's shape. It's cool in summer and pleasantly warm in winter.

SAFE
Thanks to the non-slip rubber upper surface, the cow is gripped firmly and cannot slip off. In this way the ALANTA waterbed keeps damage to hooves to a minimum.
